ANOTHER FIELD DAY FOR THE HIRED HELP

Broker Friend Recalls Some Incidents—Lawyers Clash.

New York, June 17.—The taking of testimony of the servants and employees of the Gould estates, Castle Gould at Port Washington, N. Y., and Blue Gap, in Virginia, was continued today at the trial of the suit of Katherine Clemmons Gould for a separation from Howard Gould, and alimony amounting to $250,000 a year. The defense has called a small army of maids, stable men, gardeners, clerks, carpenters and other employees to testify to the actions and conduct of Mrs. Gould in an effort to justify Mr. Gould in leaving his wife on account of her alleged addiction to the use of intoxicants rendering her unfit for household and family duties, according to the husband's contention.

May Hold Night Sessions. The prospects of a large volume of such testimony yet to be taken and the announcement of Mr. Shearn, Mrs. Gould's lawyer, that he had some fifty witnesses to call in rebuttal, led Justice Dowling to order longer sessions of the trial from today with the possibility of night sessions next week.

As the trial progresses the crowds of curious people who storm the doors of the court room each day, anxious to get a glimpse of the complainant's husband, increase.

Following the experience of yesterday, when the crowd attempted to rush the officers on the doors, and the trial was interrupted until the doors could be closed, Justice Dowling today ordered re-inforcements to be placed outside of the court room to keep the people away from the doors.

Mrs. Gould follows the testimony of her former servants with keen interest, frequently making notes of what they say and coaching her lawyers on cross examination.

Night Watchman Saw Signs. Andrew Frederickson, who was employed as night watchman at Castle Gould from September to December, 1906, the first witness called today, testified that he saw Mrs. Gould under the influence of liquor in his opinion.

Nov. 4, 1906. "It was in the evening and I was making the rounds of the house," the witness said. "I noticed a fire in the kitchen garden, near the house and saw a woman coming from that direction. I went up to her and found it was Mrs. Gould. She had something, but I did not understand it. I went into the kitchen garden and found the straw after in three places. While I was putting out the fire I heard low cries in the kitchen and went in and found Mrs. Gould there. She asked me if I was the man who met her. I told her I was and she asked me to go and get the key to the electric alarm, but I told her I could not, as I had to watch the place. Her face was flushed and she talked rapidly and appeared to be under the influence of some intoxicants."

The witness said he saw Mrs. Gould in the same plight and in his opinion, she was intoxicated then.

Drank a Great Deal. Edward Bechtold, who was in charge of the wines and liquors aboard the Gould's yacht Niagara in December, 1905, when the Goulds were cruising with a party of friends, testified that he saw Mrs. Gould intoxicated several times during the cruise.

SANITY INQUEST IS AGAIN POSTPONED

The Aged Mother Collapses
When Son is Ordered Back to Prison.

White Plains, N. Y., June 17.—Harry K. Thaw will have to wait in the Matteawan asylum until July 6 for a hearing to determine whether or not he is now sane and in a condition to be released from the asylum. The case came up before Justice Mills here today on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by Thaw. Thaw's counsel, Charles Morschauer, wanted to go on with the hearing, but Mr. Clark, a representative of the attorney general wanted to have the case transferred to New York county and District Attorney Jerome, of New York, asked that the hearing be postponed in order to give him an opportunity to attend to other business. Justice Mills decided that the hearing would be held in White Plains.

Wanted Thaw Kept in Jail. Mr. Morschauer asked that Thaw be kept in the jail of either Westchester or Dutchess county until the hearing, but the justice declined to grant this. Justice Mills, however, ordered Dr. Baker, of the asylum, to permit Thaw to stay up until 9 o'clock at night on the representation of Thaw's counsel that he was compelled to go to bed at 8 p. m. and that it was too early.

Mr. Morschauer declared that District Attorney Jerome was unnecessarily hounding Thaw and that the asylum authorities were unnecessarily antagonistic. He said that all Thaw's papers were taken from him and that his counsel was permitted to consult with him only in the presence of other intimates.

Aged Mrs. Thaw Collapses. Thaw's mother, Mrs. William Thaw, his sister, formerly the Countess of Yarmouth, and his two brothers were in the court room. When the justice announced his decision to delay the hearing Harry's mother collapsed. She shook as though seized with a chill and her daughter called out for a drink of water, saying that her mother was choking. The water revived Mrs. Thaw somewhat, but she was unable to walk without help and Harry Thaw assisted her to retire to an ante-room and remained there with her for a short time.

BURGLAR DECLARES CONGRESSMAN IS HIS FATHER

Young Man Convicted in Illinois Tells Rather Strange Tale.

Danville, Ill., June 17.—When shown a dispatch from Cumberland, Md., in which Congressman George A. Pearre, of the Sixth Maryland district disclaimed all knowledge of him, Joseph DeGracie, convicted here of burglary and who has been sentenced to the penitentiary, merely smiled.

"Just the same," he said, "he is my father. My mother and he separated when I was an infant and when she died she told me a few circumstances of the affair and also gave me a packet of which she said contained proof of my relationship to the congressman. My name is George A. Pearre, Jr."

Pearre went on to say that if Congressman Pearre said he had been married only nine years, it was to his second wife. He declares that upon his release from prison he will go to Cumberland, obtain his papers proving his identity, and claim the remainder of his fortune amounting to nearly $50,000.

Crownpoint, Ind., June 17.—The "Western Vanderbilt" one of the three events scheduled for this year, will begin over the Crownpoint-Lowell course tomorrow.

This race is for light stock cars which will contest for the Indiana trophy. There are eighteen entrants as follows:

Indiana Trophy—
Corbin, A. J. Masonville.
Bulck, Robert Burman.
Marion, Charles S. Lutz.
Ford, George Dunneil.
Chalmers-Detroit, William Knipper.
Marion, A. Monsen.
Locomobile, J. W. Florida.

Fal-Car, John Rugh.
Stoddard-Dayton, Wiseman.
Chalmers-Detroit, Al Poole.
Stoddard-Dayton, Wright.
Chalmers-Detroit, J. A. Mason.

Race Officials Arrive. The officials in charge of the racing who arrived here today are: Referee, Ann Paine, of Minneapolis; starter, Fred J. Wagner, New York; clerk of course, C. P. Root, Chicago; chief timer, Harry Knights, Boston; judges, John Farson, John C. Eastman and Fred D. Countess, of Chicago; H. O. Smith, of Indianapolis; Judge W. C. McMahon, Crownpoint, Ind.; Chief V. S. Reiter, Hammond, Ind.; chief flagman, F. B. Wood, Elgin, Ill.; chief of electric timing, B. Edwards, Chicago; commissary general, O. G. Temme, Chicago.

The Crownpoint-Lowell park way is 23.6 miles in length, with long straightaways on three sides. The fourth side is irregular from Crownpoint to Cedar lake about five miles. As the Indiana trophy race calls for ten laps, the cars must travel 236 miles. This is but sixty-one miles less than the Vanderbilt race on Long Island last year. The Coble cup race on the Crownpoint-Lowell track Saturday, the big event of the meet, is seventeen laps, or 402 miles, which is 168 miles longer than the Long Island route.

Will Be Supreme Test. It will furnish one of the most severe tests of automobile stability in the history of motor car racing. In fact, it has been stated by many drivers that the pilot who best saves his car will win both races.

Final work on the cars for tomorrow's race was done today. Better than a mile a minute has been made in practice. Col. Joseph B. Sanborn and nine hundred men of the First regiment, I. N. G., by special permission of the governor of Indiana will arrive with full equipment from Chicago tonight. They will patrol the entire course during both races.

Some Fast Trials. Robertson in his Locomobile, took another trial at the "S" curve today again beating all previous records. He dodged several truck wagons and yet made the lap according to an ordinary watch in 23:10. That was the average at least. One man caught him in 22:20 and another in 24:20. Ser-

PROMPT ACTION ON SPECIAL MESSAGE

Resolution in Senate for Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

TO PAVE THE WAY FOR INCOME TAX

Southern Member Wants It to Cover All Direct Taxation.

Washington, June 17.—That "congress shall have power to lay and collect direct taxes upon income without apportionment among the several states, according to population" is the subject of an amendment to the constitution proposed in a resolution submitted to the senate today by Senator Brown. The resolution provides for the submission of the question to the legislatures of the several states for their approval as suggested by the president. It was referred to the committee on finance.

Senator McLaurin, of Mississippi, suggested that if the reference to direct taxes was stricken out it would accomplish the object sought and at the same time would permit the levying of other taxes on the same line instead of confining it to incomes alone.

Agreeing with the Mississippiian, Mr. Brown said his purpose was to confine the tax to incomes.

PRACTICING FOR A NAVAL WAR WITH GERMANY

British Fleet Goes Into Annual Maneuvers With Conflict in Mind.

London, June 17.—The mobilization of the British fleet for the annual maneuvers was practically completed this morning and something like 350 warships are now making their way to their respective stations.

The maneuvers will be secret, but the general scheme is understood to be a repetition of the plan of last year, which, however, resulted in a fiasco, owing to the fog, the opposing fleets never came into contact. The forces this year are divided into red, white and blue fleets. The red represents a German force assigned to a position on the east coast of Scotland.

Its duty is to bring the white or North sea fleet into action before the latter can effect a junction with the blue fleet, which is patrolling the west coast of Scotland.

A condition of the maneuvers is that the white fleet can pass only through Pentland Firth, or southward by way of Dover straits. Eighteen flag officers are engaged. Vice Admiral Sir William Henry May is in supreme command.

BRANDENBURG SOLD THE LETTER TO LINCOLN

Sunday Editor of New York
Paper Tells of Buying Cleveland Fake.

New York, June 17.—Charles M. Lincoln, Sunday editor of the New York Times, was re-called to the stand today at the continuation of the trial of Broughton Brandenburg, the writer, on a charge of grand larceny growing out of the sale of an alleged forged letter of the late Grover Cleveland to the New York Times.

The article was admitted in evidence at the close of the session on Tuesday. On cross-examination by attorneys for the defense Mr. Lincoln stated that he had twice sent a reporter to F. S. Hastings, one of the executors of Mr. Cleveland's will to ascertain if the article was genuine. Two letters which the witness said the reporter had secured from Mr. Hastings were admitted in evidence. In one of them over the signature of F. S. Hastings, the statement was made that the writer had given Brandenburg a "formal written assignment by which he has the exclusive right to such article."

Thought Article Genuine. The second letter in part said "I have examined the signature submitted to me by Mr. Ybarra and compared it with others of Mr. Cleveland's and believe that the one submitted by Mr. Ybarra is genuine. I have no reason to believe that the article furnished you by Mr. Brandenburg purporting to have been written by Mr. Cleveland is not genuine."

Mr. Lincoln adhered to his cross examination to his positive identification of the article as the one Brandenburg had given him. He had cut off the signature and preserved it in a small envelope after sending the article to the composing room, he testified.

The original article had been returned to Brandenburg after its publication, he said. Brandenburg had objected to the signature having been cut off and he informed the defendant that the signature would not be given up because the genuineness of the article had been questioned. He did not know that Brandenburg had later voluntarily returned the article to the newspaper office.

The witness said that he had no recollection of Brandenburg's saying anything about intending to sell the article to the republican national committee, but stated that that committee had called the office on the telephone and asked permission to use the article and credit it to the Times.

After Mr. Lincoln had stated that Mr. Brandenburg had told him he needed the signature for his own protection, Mr. Lincoln was excused and the prosecution began to read Brandenburg's testimony before the grand jury, which indicted him.

Czar Nicholas and Emperor William Meet in the Far North.

Viborg, Finland, June 17.—The British steamer Northburg, Captain Robertson, was fired upon last night by a Russian torpedo boat for approaching too close to the bay of Finnish coast where Emperor Nicholas and Emperor William are to meet today.

The Northburg was hailed off Wroplapt, Island of Bioroke. The projectile from the torpedo boat pierced a steam pipe and one member of the crew of the English vessel was wounded. The incident shows the extreme nervousness of the Russians.

Russian torpedo boats have been patrolling Pitkpas bay, the rendezvous of the two emperors, and it was one of the guard vessels that fired on the British ship.

THE EMPERORS MEET.

Helsingfors, June 17.—The German imperial yacht Hohenzollern with Emperor William on board joined the Russian squadron conveying Emperor Nicholas on board the imperial yacht Standart at 10 o'clock this morning. Emperor Nicholas immediately went on board the Hohenzollern and welcomed Emperor William. All the ships present were dressed and manned.

NO WORD IN LONDON.

London, June 17.—No report has yet reached the foreign office here of a British steamer having been fired on by a Russian torpedo boat in the vicinity of Viborg. No such steamer as the Northburg appears on the British shipping registers.

Thirty-five voting machines are now on their way to Fort Wayne for use at the city primaries on July 23, and the remainder of the purchase by the county commissioners will follow in a short time. The machines are of the ten-party pattern with primary attachment.

Paul Kinder, the well-known contractor, has made formal announcement of his candidacy for the democratic nomination for the city council from the Second ward, and is receiving many assurances of support from his friends.

Judge B. W. Skelton today filed with City Clerk Mungovan the official declaration of his candidacy for the republican nomination for mayor. This is a formality, necessary in order to get a place on the ballot, and it effectively disposes of persistent rumors to the effect that the judge might be induced to get out of the way in order to give Mr. Grice a clear field. "You know me well enough to know that I'm not a quitter," said Judge Skelton to a Sentinel representative today. "I will be in the race to the finish."

There are persistent rumors today to the effect that Marion Johnson is likely to be coaxed into making the race for the city clerkship on the republican ticket. Mr. Johnson is now a member of the city council.

TAKES SMALL HAND IN SENATE DEBATE

Heavy Duty is Placed on Foreign Made Picture
Post Cards.

Washington, June 17.—Immediately upon taking up the tariff bill today the senate agreed to amendments previously offered by Mr. Aldrich for the committee on finance, relating to flint, glazed and other surface-coated papers, composed of lithograph paper, paper, etc., as recommended by the committee, provoked a dispute between Senators Brewster and Smoot as to whether it raised or lowered the rates of the Dingley law. The Utah senator contended that it lowered the rates of the Dingley law. An amendment was offered by Mr. Brewster lowering from 3 to 2 cents a pound and 15 per cent. ad valorem the duty on this class of paper. The amendment was voted down 27 to 35. Republicans voting with the democrats for the low rate were Beveridge, Brewster, Brown, Burdett, Burton, Clapp, Crawford, Cummins, Curtis and LaFollette.

Agrees to Post Card Amendment. By a viva voce vote the senate agreed to the committee amendment fixing the duty on illustrated post cards at 15 cents per pound and 25 per cent. ad valorem. As stated by Mr. Smoot this was an increase from 5 cents a pound or 325 per cent. ad valorem, the very great increase being made necessary on account of the intense German competition which was supplying the domestic market with post cards showing American views.

The subject was introduced by Senator Aldrich, who as chairman of the finance committee, proposed an amendment increasing the duty on print paper from one-tenth to two-tenths of a cent per pound, which, he said, equalled $4 a ton. The Dingley law placed the duty at $6 a ton and the house reduced it to $3 a ton. Senator Brown, of Nebraska, immediately took the floor to speak on the subject.

Offering an amendment to place print paper on the free list, Mr. Brown declared that the paper industry did not object to the amendment.

IS RIVER'S VICTIM A. H. YAWGER OR IS IT NOT?

Coldwater Man En Route to Fort Wayne in Effort to Solve Mystery.

Whether or not the lifeless body of the man dragged from the St. Mary's river at the foot of Harrison street Monday morning is that of Adam F. Yawger, who has been missing for three weeks from his home in Coldwater, Mich., is the question that will be answered this evening. D. A. Buck, chief of police at Coldwater, has sent a man from Coldwater for that purpose, and he will reach Fort Wayne this evening.

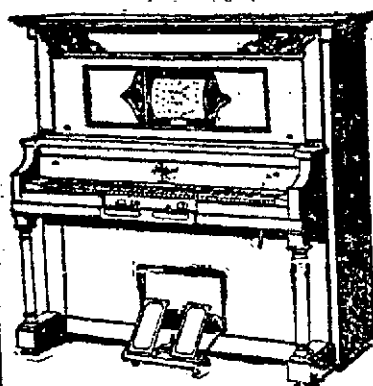

Communication by telephone with officers at Coldwater would seem to indicate that the drowned man whose identity has remained a mystery is Yawger, and a photograph of Yawger, taken some years ago, bears a striking resemblance to the dead man. However, Warren Drink and Will Johnson, former residents of Coldwater, who are now in the employ of the Home Telephone company in this city, say that while the dead man resembles Yawger, they are of the opinion that Yawger was minus a finger, while the hands of the dead man are complete. Chief of Police Buck later in the day, said that Yawger had not lost a finger and he believes the identity of the dead man has been solved. To settle it definitely, however, he is sending a friend of Yawger to Fort Wayne to view the remains. Chief Buck says Yawger left Coldwater three weeks ago, telling his wife that he was going away on a brief trip, and that his family has heard nothing from him since that time.

"I served Mrs. Gould with brandy every night," the witness said, "and at the dinners aboard the yacht she drank more than anyone else."

After a dinner at Kingston, at which Mrs. Gould drank wine, the witness noticed her as she was going to her stateroom to retire.

"She stopped in the music room and took hold of a chair to steady herself," the witness said, "and she had to take a long breath before she could go on."

On cross-examination the witness said he had made an affidavit for Mr. Gould's lawyers, and had talked with them about testifying.

Broker Saw Her Intoxicated.

Melville E. Chapman, a broker, who had been a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gould on the yacht Niagara on several trips in 1919, testified that Mrs. Gould was frequently under the influence of liquor and very abusive in her language to the servants at those times. He said that during a cruise to the West Indies he remembered several occasions when Mrs. Gould had been drinking brandy and was very abusive to everyone, and would become greatly excited and say that she intended to run the boat, and that no one should take orders from anyone but herself. The witness described two such outbursts, one in Santiago harbor, and the other in Havana harbor.

"What did Mr. Gould do or say on these occasions?" asked Mr. Nicoll.

"He invariably tried to soothe and calm her and pass the incident off pleasantly," replied the witness.

On cross-examination Mr. Shearn asked if the witness was not under heavy financial obligations to Howard Gould, and if Mr. Gould had not put large sums of money in the business of the brokerage firm of which the witness was a member. The witness said he was under no financial obligations to Mr. Gould.

Nicoll Calls It Blackmail.

In endeavoring to get several letters in evidence which Mr. Shearn contended would impeach the credibility of the witness Chapman, and which Justice Dowling would not allow admitted, a tilt occurred between opposing counsel which called for the severe rebuke of Mr. Nicoll by Justice Dowling, who requested Mr. Nicoll to apologize. "This is only a case of blackmail tactics practiced from start to finish in this suit," shouted Mr. Nicoll, the defendant's counsel, at Mr. Shearn, as he was pressing the admission of the letters. Mr. Shearn promptly demanded an apology.

"I do not intend to apologize for any such remarks," said Mr. Nicoll.

Justice Dowling sternly said that Mr. Nicoll owed an apology to the court and Mr. Shearn for making such a charge. Mr. Nicoll apologized to the court and said he meant no reflection on Mr. Shearn personally, but he believed it had been the attitude of others on the opposite side to extort money from his client. This closed the incident.

JAMISON TAKES HIS CASE TO JUDGE O'ROURKE

Appeals from City Court in Gaming Case—The Other Cases.

Attorney John W. Eggeman appeared in the city court today for Eugene Jamison, who pleaded guilty to the charge of conducting a gaming house and took an appeal to the circuit court in order to enable him to return to the city and appear in the night for the possession of the roulette wheel and slot machines in possession of the police. He was fined and given a jail sentence and has been absent from the city since the raid. He was captured once before and fined and had to serve part of the time in jail and he evidently looked for his former conviction to be used against him.

This is the last day upon which an appeal can be taken and it is possible that Jamison may come in handy to the real owner of the gambling outfit when the question of destroying it comes up in the circuit court.

Scorcher Pays a Fine. Al Kinnard was the first of the scorching automobilists to feel the heavy hand of the law and this morning in the city court he was compelled to pay a fine of $5 and costs for driving his machine at a greater rate of speed than the law contemplates. He came near running down several persons on Tuesday evening at Calhoun street and Douglas avenue and Patrolman Ed Bevelhimer, who happened to be one of the number, filed the affidavit.

Got Long Terms. Ollie Hinkle and Anna Zolman who have been employed at the Wayne club, were fined $5 and costs and sentenced to sixty days in jail for stealing from the Wayne club. They have been living together in rooms on Columbia street and have taken knives, forks, spoons, linen and towels and these were recovered by the police. A basketful of it had been sent away from their rooms when the police threatened to arrest them.

TWENTY-FOUR CASES IN CITY.

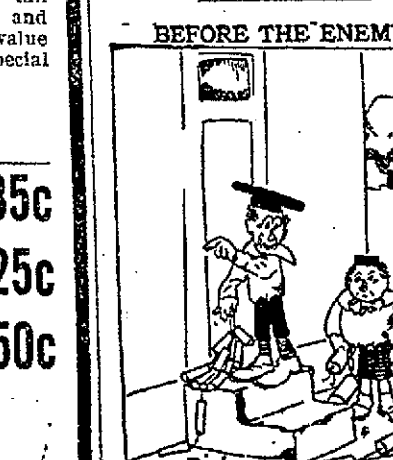

New Smallpox Patients Discovered. By the Authorities Today.

Two new smallpox cases in the Noll family, at 1867 East Creighton avenue and two suspects in the Weaver family were reported to the health department today and with that of Mrs. Jennie Wood, who was removed from her home on East Creighton avenue yesterday afternoon to the isolation hospital, the total is now twenty-four. Mrs. Wood went to the hospital the same day her daughter was discharged. The two suspects are in the Weaver home, 2235 Oliver street, where there is already one patient, while another member of the household is at the isolation hospital. There are cases under the surveillance of the department in the Turner home at 2237 Oliver street.

ECHO OF OLD CASE.

Petition to Sell Notes in Rolling Ellison Bankruptcy Matter. An echo of an old bankruptcy case that created a tremendous sensation when it developed several years ago has just been heard in the court of Referee Wood, when S. K. Ganiard, trustee of the bankrupt estate of Rolling Ellison at Lagrange, filed a petition for an order to sell notes, accounts and other personal property of the bankrupt at public sale. Referee Wood has set July 1 as the date for the hearing on the petition.

ARCHERS ASK MONEY FOR THE SAND USED

Suit Entered Against the Metropolitan Company—The Courts.

Suit has been entered in the superior court by Andrew and Winfield S. Archer against the Metropolitan Engineering and Construction company demanding $3,500 in payment for sand and other materials used in paving the streets for which the company had the contracts last summer. The company has not received its money for the work.

The streets in question are Columbia avenue, Sutherland, Taylor and Brackner and all have been held up by the board of works on the ground that the surfacing is imperfect. Attorney Howard L. Townsend filed the suits.

Forced to Leave Him. Etta E. Pattee has entered suit for support against Clarence W. Pattee in which she alleges that by reason of the fact that he cursed and abused her and yanked her about by the nape of the neck she was compelled to leave him. She says that since the separations in April he has steadily refused to give her anything for her support, even to supplying food for the baby, and that she has been compelled to supply this out of her earnings of $2.50 as a domestic.

He furnished them no coal or clothes in the winter, she alleges, but took the money he earned as a painter and spent it in the company of other women. H. I. Smith filed the suit.

Court Notes. In the superior court Dale Hadsell was granted a divorce from James Hadsell.

Corra Benton has filed suit for $1,500 damages against John Bennington, alleging that he brought about her downfall under a promise to marry. Emrick & Emrick are her attorneys.

DAYTON CUTS LOOSE TO HONOR THE WRIGHTS

Big Celebration in Home

Town of the Aeroplane

Heroes is Under Way.

Dayton, Ohio, June 17.—Somebody at dawn today yelled "hooray for little old Dayton," which, coupled with the names of Wilbur and Orville Wright, immediately became the slogan of Dayton's two day celebration in honor of the world's champion aviators. By the booming of cannon, shrieking of whistles and ringing of bells, the citizens of Dayton made it known that whatever claim the rulers of Europe or the government at Washington has upon the Wright brothers, theirs is that of fellow townspersons.

Whistles and Bells Make a Din.

The ceremonies began at 9 a. m. At that hour streets were thronged with people. For ten minutes every whistle, bell and tin horn in town joined in an outburst of hilarious sound. On a banner appeared the words "America is the home of aerial navigation, and Dayton is the home of the world's first aerial navigators."

Other inscriptions were "They're the right Mr. Wrights all right," and "The Wrights that made Dayton famous." Almost every Daytonian knew the Wrights from early childhood. "Why," said one enthusiast, "I knew Wilbur when I was a kid. We used to go swimming in the Miami river."

Up to the hour of the opening ceremony Wilbur and Orville, hammering away in the workshop, were still busy with the details of packing up parts of an aeroplane for shipment to Washington. Sister Millicent Wright, a sister, sister-in-law, and the father and brother and Orville Wright, the father and brother, when Wilbur and Orville emerged from their home. Escorted by state militia, troops of regulars and a brass band, the Wrights were driven to a platform where was given a pageant representing events from the founding of Dayton, 112 years ago down to the arrival of the Wright brothers.

Got Idea From a Toy.

Conrad J. Schmidt, president of the local school board, thanked the aviators for the fame they had brought the city. Other speeches were made telling how on what is known as "Huffman prairie" eight miles east of Dayton, the Wrights in 1905 made the record breaking flight which first brought upon them the attention of the world; how the father of the boys years ago had given them a helicopter to play with and how it was really by this toy that Wilbur and Orville were stirred to the early experiments from which the modern aeroplane was evolved. The chief event of the celebration will occur tomorrow when medals will be presented by the nation, the state of Ohio and the city. Governor Judson Harmon, of Ohio, will present the state medals. Those authorized by congress will be presented by General James Allen, signal officer who has been designated by Secretary of War Dickinson for the purpose.

After completing their flights for government which are to begin at Washington next week, both the Wrights probably in August will sail for Germany to take up their work there.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Otto Hartwig, 27, designer, and Nellie B. Dalton, 27, Alloway, 25, machinist, and Martha L. Schoepke, 25.

Otto L. Kirsch, 28, lumber dealer, and Elma E. Seelig, 21.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Paulay have returned from Rensselaire, where they were in attendance at the commencement exercises of St. Joseph's college. Their son, Maurice Paulay, was one of the graduates.

HENRY FIRST UNDER NEW BUILDING MEASURE

Councilman Has to Pay a Fee of $5 Instead of 50 Cents.

Councilman J. M. Henry, of the Fourth ward, smilingly admits that he is probably the first victim of his own building ordinance, which became a law by the signature of Mayor Hosey yesterday afternoon. Mr. Henry is preparing to remove his office building from Jefferson and Fulton streets to the corner of Greeley and Webster streets, and application had been made to the board of public works for a permit to do so, which under the old ordinance would have cost fifty cents. In some way or other, however, Councilman Henry's moving permit did not get issued from the office of the board of public works until after his new building ordinance was in effect, under which the fee is $5, instead of fifty cents as formerly. The Fourth ward councilman is the first man to be taxed the increased fee.

Kickers Are Due Tonight.

Kickers against the proposed resurfacing of Calhoun street, between the railroads; Berry street, between Clinton and Barr, and Columbia street, between Columbia and Harrison, will be heard tonight by the board of public works.

The board will receive bids for a sewer west of Broadway and another north of Wildwood and a remonstrance thought sufficient to kill the proposed cement sidewalks on Creighton avenue, between Broadway and Calhoun street, is on file and will be taken up.

DROPPED HER BASE TO WAITING HANDS

Then Mother Leaped Three Stories After It—Fire in Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, June 17.—In a fire in a five-story tenement house today the one hundred panic-stricken occupants were saved by daring rescues by firemen. Many jumped from the third floor to the roof of a second-story building. No one was seriously hurt.

Mrs. Nicholas Berri ran to a third-story window overlooking a street and holding her baby poised for an instant over the crowd below, she hugged and kissed it and then dropped the child towards the hundreds of upraised hands. Richard Wheeler, a cattle drover, caught the baby. The mother, seeing her child was safe, smiled and then, to escape the flames near her, leaped to the sidewalk, suffering only slight bruises.

VOTING ON OPTION TODAY.

Last Scheduled Election in State in Progress in Warrick.

Boonville, Ind., June 17.—A local option election is in progress in this (Warrick) county today. The result is expected to be close, both "wets" and "drys" claiming victory, but neither estimating their majorities at more than 500. There are nineteen saloons in the county. The local option election today is the last scheduled so far in the state.

AMERICAN STEAMER ASHORE.

Manila, June 17.—According to telegraphic advices received here the American steamer San Juan is ashore at the mouth of Carangian harbor, Island of Samar.

The Knights of Columbus, at their meeting Monday evening, will make arrangements for joining the annual outing of that fraternity at Cedar Point, July 4 to 18. It is a reunion of the Knights of Columbus of Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania, and the local delegation will arrange to take its baseball team to enter the contests.

Among the Fort Wayne people who will attend the state Sunday school convention at Fort Wayne next week are Rev. C. D. Barry, Mrs. Carrie Tinkham, Mrs. M. A. Mason, Mrs. F. R. Poole, Mrs. J. R. Morris.

Miss Effie N. Chambers is the head of the girls' high school at Kassab, Turkey, which is said to have been destroyed by Moslems. According to Miss Chambers' last report the school year ended in 1917 was remarkably successful. Fifty girls attended the school, of whom fifteen were graduated. These graduates either took charge of lower schools in the Kassab district or continued their studies at Aintab seminary.

Alleluia or Hallelujah Victory was a victory by the Saxons under St. Germanus over the Picts and Britons. The Christians all shouted "Alleluia!" and so terrified the heathen that they took to flight.

DO NOT SURVIVE TO GAS CITY FOLK WILL SEE HIS NATIVE LAND AGAIN

Isidor Wunderlin Succumbs on Eve of Return to Germany—The Deaths.

Isidor Wunderlin, 77 years of age, died at 3 o'clock this morning at the home of his son, William Wunderlin, 412 East Jefferson street, death having been due to an asthmatic attack, complicated with the infirmities of age.

Two years ago the aged man came from Germany for a visit with his children in America, and he had planned to return to Europe this month. Death intervened, however, and Mr. Wunderlin was denied his desire of seeing his native land once more. Three children survive. They are William Wunderlin, of this city; Mrs. Frank Herman, of Cincinnati, and Miss Kate Wunderlin, residing in Germany. Since coming to Fort Wayne Mr. Wunderlin had been an attendant at St. Mary's Catholic church.

JACQUES.

Mrs. Lee W. Jacques, of this city, wife of the master mechanic of the Fort Wayne and Washburn Valley Traction company, died Wednesday morning at the home of her sister, in Adamsville, Ohio, near Zanesville. Mr. and Mrs. Jacques came to Fort Wayne about four years ago from Minneapolis, and they resided at 332 East Pontiac street. Mrs. Jacques had long been in frail health, but her death was sudden and wholly unexpected. Mrs. Jacques accompanied her husband as far as Zanesville when he went to Philadelphia last week on a business trip, and expected to spend some time there visiting her sister. The husband was still in Philadelphia when news of his wife's sudden death reached him. Mrs. Jacques had made many friends in Fort Wayne, to whom news of her demise will be a distressing shock. The funeral service and interment will occur in Ohio.

FUNERAL NOTICES.

Lauer.—Funeral services of Mrs. Frank Lauer will be held Saturday morning at 8:30 from the residence, 1903 Hanna street, and at 9 o'clock from St. Patrick's Catholic church.

Keller.—Funeral services of William E. Keller will be held Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence, interment at Paradise Grove cemetery. The remains of Mrs. Anna Destrout will be shipped to Detroit tomorrow after brief funeral services at 9:30 o'clock from the residence of a sister, Mrs. Craven, 203 East Williams street.

ALL READY FOR THE GREAT WESTERN VANDERBILT

eral watches gave Lytle in an Aperson credit for 24 minutes. There were few watches; however, as presumably there was to be no practice, the ban having been placed on it in order to allow the work on the rough stretch of the west leg. Strang in a light Buick, wandered over the route mainly for the purpose of noting any changes made by the road bed repairs.

Col. Sanborn preceded his main command, appearing khaki clad and goggle eyed in an automobile at the head of an advance detail of fifty men of his regiment. The men perched themselves on great stacks of tents borne by auto-trucks and proceeded to their camping site near the grand stand. When the regiment proper under Lieut. Col. Eddy, marched out to the scene tonight it will find the main tents already pitched.

The men themselves will sleep in the shelter tents which each man carries. The thirty cars which will strive for victory in the races were weighed today and all were found of the proper weight.

Magistrates Disappear.

A report had gained much currency connecting the complaints made by some farmers as to the monopolizing of the roads by the races, and the alleged disappearance of magistrates. The report has it that the justices are all absent, hence no papers tending to interfere with the races can be issued. It is extremely doubtful if such papers would be made out in any event, but the fact remains that George Fisher, deputy clerk of the Lake circuit court and a magistrate as well, and H. B. Nicholson, justice of the peace, were pursuing their ordinary vocations in Crown Point today.

Decorations sprung up in the streets of Crown Point and Lovell like magic today. Flags of every color were strung on strands across the streets and buildings were bedecked. Country folk in every direction of vehicle plodded into the cities or took their allotted places in various parking grounds which occupy nearly all of the space on both sides of the long course.

Auto Parties Begin to Arrive.

Automobile parties from Chicago and other cities in this vicinity came in force, although the great mass of them are not expected until tomorrow morning. All spectators, according to the rules, must be in their allotted places at 7 a. m. If their route lies over the course. After that hour they must take uncertain surfaces of ordinary roads. Where the latter cross the course (jacks) have been built. Estimates of the expected crowd vary greatly. They run as low as 100,000 and as high as 250,000 persons. It is certain, however, that Lake county will care for a far greater number than ever before in its history.

FARNAN-LAD IMPROVING.

A slight improvement in the condition of Paul Farnan is noticeable today. The lad has been unconscious for several weeks following a fall and an operation was performed upon him in which a number of doctors took a great interest. Today he was able to move his feet somewhat and also the eyes, though little of life is reflected in them.

GAS CITY FOLK WILL COME TO ATTEND SERVICE

Bishop Alerding to Confer Priestly Orders Upon Class of Three.

Traveling in a special car over the Interurban lines, fully eighty residents of Gas City will arrive in Fort Wayne tomorrow morning to attend the service at the Cathedral, where at 9 o'clock Rt. Rev. Bishop Alerding will ordain three young men to the priesthood. The candidates are:

Rev. T. Biegel, of Elwood; educated at Cincinnati. Rev. Robert J. Halpin, of Gas City; educated at Cincinnati.

Rev. Charles Marr, of Detroit; educated at St. Meinrad's. The young priests will be at once assigned to service in the diocese of Fort Wayne. Members of the Gas City congregation will attest their interest in Rev. Father Halpin by making the trip to Fort Wayne to witness his elevation to the priesthood, and it is expected a considerable representation of the clergy of the diocese will also be present.

IS MARRIED IN LONDON.

Daughter of Hon. Robert J. Wynne Weds a Briton.

London, June 17.—Ida M. Wynne, second daughter of Robert J. Wynne, the outgoing American consul general in London, was married in this city today to Hugh Ronald French, a first lieutenant in the Seventh dragoon guard. The ceremony was performed in Brompton Oratory, only relatives and personal friends of the bride and groom having been invited. Following the wedding there was a reception at the Savoy hotel.

THE INCOME TAX PROPOSAL.

In a special message to congress President Taft proposes a definite solution of the income tax problem. He would have the federal constitution amended so that the power of the government to impose a tax directly on incomes shall be specifically stated and defined. The president urges this course as preferable to any method of evasion or to dependence on a possible change of view in the supreme court of the United States. The thoughtful opinion of the country will be in agreement with the president in this.

The federal government has imposed an income tax and it was sustained by the supreme court. Many years later, when an income tax was one of the provisions of the Wilson-Gorman revenue measure, the court declared the tax unconstitutional. What the court might now do is, of course, mere guesswork. To state such power of the government in a constitutional amendment will forever settle the vexed question.

Very forcibly President Taft asserts that such taxing power should belong to the government without question or dispute, pointing out that in time of great national crises the safety of the government might rest upon the power to raise revenue by that means. It will take several years to place the income tax provision in the constitution, for our method of amending that instrument is cumbersome, but once there the question for all time will be settled. And that will be as it should be. Certainly there should be no legal obstacle to the levying of an income or any other just tax whenever the need is.

The class of women he met at roadhouses in the environs of Indianapolis is the cause to which an embezzling deputy clerk of Marion county ascribes his downfall. He surely struck the easy road to the devil. If there is a more efficacious combination for the ruin of men it is the roadhouse and the female habitue of the roadhouse. Of course with gambling as a sideline the result may be attained with somewhat more dispatch, but not more surely. The male being who becomes a roadhouse patron is sure soon to part with his self-respect and then with his own money and finally with whatever money he can in any way come by, no matter whose. If there is one chute which dips steeper and straighter into hell than another, its starting point is doubtless in the roadhouse. That's the place where the orgy grows ripe—where the game is played to the limit.

County option is putting the finishing touches on a six months' campaign preparatory to a summer vacation. County option has earned the rest. It has worked with strenuous vim and achieved tremendous results. Practically three-fourths of the state has been made "dry" since the first election under the new law was held last December. The "wets" have saved the saloons in a dozen counties. The counties containing the five large cities of the state—Marion, Allen, Vanderburg, Vigo and St. Joseph—have had no test of sentiment. The anti-saloon league has wisely waited in these counties to gain prestige by the sweeping character of its victories of the greater part of the state. There has been a strong feeling in most of these counties in favor of challenging the saloons to combat, but more conservative leaders believe there will be wisdom in waiting until conditions promise victory.

Samuel Untermyer, a legal gentleman whose profound learning and transcendent talents have for the most part been employed in the behalf of predatory wealth, declares there never has been a serious, earnest effort to prosecute the trusts in this country. Have no reliable information otherwise at hand and won't open the discussion. But however that may be, there is a certain United States judge who took it that the government was not only prosecuting in great good faith, but had fully made out its case against an alleged malefactor of great wealth. Higher court may have taken the Untermyer view, but it's a very patent fact that Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis did not.

Czar and kaiser are having a heart to heart talk way up in the region of the arctic circle. British navy at the same time is practicing a war game with special reference to a hypothetical German invasion. Going to be a fine family quarrel, one of these days, and Uncle Ed and Nephew Bill and Cousin Nick and some more of the fellows who won't mind their mamma's will get soiled and battered.

Too much tariff is had for the Filipino's industrial affairs. Too little tariff is bad for his future independence. Hence, it will be seen that the thing to do is to tax him like sin and let American trusts have the benefit, so that no matter what the tariff may do the Filipino, it will not be an entirely ill wind.

Just waiting to hear whether the ultra-conservatives who do the talking when big money wants to make a noise are prepared to call an income tax amendment a safe and sane proposition of the sort to be expected of a man such as William Howard Taft has been represented to be.

"The weird nervous trouble" which report says is ailing Jack London will probably diagnose just about the same as the trouble ailing a good many of Jack's readers.

GIVEN STIFF SENTENCE.

Gets Two-Year Sentence for Violating Ohio Law.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 17.—The jury in the federal court did not leave the jury box yesterday afternoon to reach a verdict of guilty in the case of James L. Angles, of Evansville, charged in eight counts with violation of the oleomargarine laws. Judge Anderson sentenced him to two years' confinement in the Leavenworth prison and fined him $10.

The case is one of the most important the federal authorities here have had to deal with. Angles did a large business with the most important hotels throughout the state. He shipped colored oleomargarine in old boxes, and thus escaped paying the tax. The last seven counts against him were on the grounds of falsification. The first count was on the ground of the coloring of the oleo. The entire day was spent in taking testimony. When called before the judge to receive sentence Angles admitted that he had knowingly violated the law.

"Then why did you plead not guilty?" asked Judge Anderson.

"My attorney told me to," he said. "Did you tell your attorney all the evidence that would be brought against you here?"

"Yes."

"How much are you paying him?"

"Two hundred dollars."

"That's a pretty stiff price for that kind of advice," said the judge.

M. S. Meyberg was Angles's attorney.

"The Thralldom of Names"

Striking and Characteristic Article From the Pen of Theodore Roosevelt—A Thing is Good or Bad for What it is and Not for What it is Called.

New York, June 17.—Discussion of the political problems confronting the country through the development of power by large corporations is made in vigorous language by ex-President Roosevelt in his article in this week's Outlook. Taking for his subject "The Thralldom of Names," Mr. Roosevelt says it behooves our people never to be misled by designing people who appeal to the reverence for or antipathy toward a given name in order to achieve some alien purpose. The rule of a mob, he declares, may be as tyrannical and oppressive as the rule of a single individual, and the rule of an oligarchy, whether this oligarchy is a plutocracy or a bureaucracy may be as sordid and bloodthirsty as that of a mob; but the mob leaders usually state that all that they are doing is necessary to advance the cause of "liberty," while the oligarchy and oligarchy are usually defended upon the ground that the course they follow is absolutely necessary so as to secure "order."

"Many excellent people are taken in by the use of the word 'liberty' at the one time," says the ex-president, "and the use of the word 'order' at the other and ignore the simple fact that despotism is despotism, tyranny tyranny, oppression oppression, whether committed by one individual or by many individuals, by a state or by a private corporation. All forms of tyranny and cruelty must alike be condemned by honest men."

"We in this country have been very fortunate. Thanks to the teaching and the practice of the men whom we most revere as leaders, of the men like Washington and Lincoln, we have hitherto escaped the twin gulfs of despotism and mob rule, and we have never been in any danger from the worst forms of religious bitterness. But we should therefore be all the more careful, as we deal with our industrial and social problems, not to fall into mistakes similar to those which have brought lasting disaster on less fortunately situated peoples.

"First and foremost, we must stand firmly on a basis of good sound ethics. We intend to do what is right for it is right and sufficient for the stern right. If business is hurt by the stern exposure of crookedness and the result of efforts to punish the crooked men, then business must be hurt, even though good men are involved in the hurting, until it is possible to prosecute wrongdoing without stampeding the business community into a terror-struck defense of the wrongdoers and an angry assault upon those who have exposed them. On the other hand, we must beware, above all things, of being misled by wicked or foolish men who would condone homicide and violence, and apologize for the dynamite and the assassin because, forsooth, they choose to take the ground that crime is no crime if the wicked man happens also to have been a shiftless and unthrifty or lazy man who has never amassed property. It is essential that we should wrest the control of the government out of the hands of rich men who use it for unhealthy purposes, and should keep it out of their hands; and to this end the first requisite is to provide means adequately to deal with corporations, which are essential to modern business, but which, under the decisions of the courts, and because of the shortsightedness of the public, have become the chief factors in political and business debasement. But it would be just as bad to put the control of the government into the hands of demagogues and visionaries who seek to pander to ignorance and prejudice by penalizing thrift and business enterprise, and ruining all men of means, with an attendant result, the ruin of the entire community."

democracy of today. This law must be efficient, and therefore it must be administered by executive officers, and not by lawsuits in the courts. If this is not done, the agitation to increase out of all measure the share of the government in the work will receive an enormous impetus. The movement for government control of the great business corporations is no more a movement against liberty than a movement to put stop to violence is a movement against liberty. The huge irresponsible corporation which demands liberty from the supervision of government agents stands on the same ground as the less dangerous criminal of the streets who wishes liberty from police interference."

The ex-president closes with a direct reference to newspapers. "Yet another thing," he says. "No movement ever has done or ever will do good in this country where assault is made not upon evil wherever found, but simply upon evil as it happens to be found in a particular class. The big newspaper, owned or controlled in Wall street, which is everlastingly preaching about the iniquity of laboring men, which is quite willing to hound politicians for their misdeeds, but which with raving fury defends all the malefactors of great wealth, stands on an exact level with, and neither above nor below, that other newspaper whose whole attack is upon men of wealth, which declines to condemn, or else condemns in apologetic manner, outrages committed by labor. This latter is the kind of paper which by torrents of foul abuse seeks to stir up a bitter class simply because he is a man of means, against every man of wealth, whether he is an honest man, who by industry and ability has honorably won his wealth, and who honestly spends it, or a man whose wealth represents robbery and whose life represents either profligacy, or at best an innate useless, and tasteless extravagance."

"This country can not afford to let its conscience grow warped and twisted, as it must grow if it takes either one of these two positions. We must draw the line, not on wealth nor on poverty; but on conduct. We must stand for the good citizen because he

"Charles I. was another composer, and I am including in my programme his effective setting of Thomas Carew's poem 'Mark How the Blushful Morn.'"

"I think everybody knows that Queen Victoria was a fine singer and a good pianist, and the late Prince Consort was most zealous in popularizing the art in this country. The majority of Prince Albert's compositions have been collected and published. Of the present members of the royal family the most distinguished as a composer is Princess Henry of Battenberg.

Kirsch-Seelig.

Salem Reformed church was the scene of a beautiful wedding this afternoon when Miss Alma Elizabeth Seelig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seelig, of 715 East Wayne street, and Mr. Otto Leroy Kirsch, of Decatur, were united in marriage by Rev. Kleismeyer. The hour of the ceremony was 4 o'clock and Rev. Hessert, of the Reformed church, of Decatur, assisted in the marriage service. The organist of the church played the wedding music from "Lohengrin" as the bridal party entered the church. The bride walked with her father and was preceded by her sister, Miss Meta Seelig as honor maid and by Misses Emma Gumpfer and Miss Erna Bruecker, of Cincinnati. During the marriage service the organist played softly Mendelssohn's Spring Song and when the bridal party left the church, Mendelssohn's wedding march. The ushers were Messrs. Ernest Brinkman, Otto Gumpfer, Edwin Ruf, Fred Ashbacher and the bridegroom had Fred L. Gentner, of Decatur, as his best man. The church was prettily decorated with palms and ferns and pots of marguerites. The bride, who is a bright and interesting young woman, looked very pretty in a white satin gown with yoke of lace and trimming of satin embroidery and plucked on. A veil of tulle was held in place with swansonia blossoms and the bride's bouquet was a shower one of bride roses. Miss Meta Seelig wore a pink and white silk chignon hung over pink silk and carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were in white silk gowns, trimmed with lace and their flowers were pink roses. All three bridesmaids wore wreaths of pink flowers in their hair. After the wedding service the bridal party went directly to the home of the bride's parents where a large reception was held. The bride's table at supper was done in pink and white with carnations and amaranth for the decoration. The rooms were beautifully decorated, all but the dining room in green and white, with pots of Marguerites, asparagus fern and small ferns of other kinds. About one hundred and seventy-five guests were present. The bride and groom will live in Decatur and their own home is all ready for them at 423 North Third street. Among the out of town guests at the wedding were the following from Decatur: Mr. and Mrs. M. Kirsch, parents of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reppert, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kirsch, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mutschler, Mrs. Bertha Knapp, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sellemeyer, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Sellemeyer and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Weiss, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Sellemeyer. The bridegroom is a member of one of the well known families of Decatur and is prominent in business affairs of that city.

IN THE THEATERS

WITH "THE MERRY GO-ROUND."

Kathryn Rowe Palmer, at Majestic Airdome, Was in "Hitchcock Co."

Before she began captivating audiences as a vaudeville star, Miss Kathryn Rowe Palmer, the dainty comedienne at the Majestic Airdome this week, had a prominent role in "The Merry Go-Round," with Raymond Hitchcock as the star. Miss Palmer's triumph in vaudeville, however, has been so pronounced that she probably would not consider an offer to take her back into musical comedy. Her character interpretations are indescribably funny, she sings well, dances gracefully and gets at once into the good graces of the audience. Mr. and Mrs. Jack McGreevey contribute largely, also, to the pleasure of the program, this week with their comedy rub act, one of the best ever given here. Newell and Niblo, in some really wonderful accomplishments with saxophone and xylophone, with Jay Bogart in his minstrel monologue, Frank Jones' pictured song and the inauguration of President Taft in moving picture complete an unusually attractive bill for the two performances which are given nightly at 8 and 9:15 o'clock.

At the Lyric.

The specialties at the Lyric last night proved popular and the audience was pleased with the attractions. Two of the feature pictures of the week are "The New Minister" and "The Settlement Workers." Other subjects are on a comedy order and all strike a popular vein. Tomorrow night's big amateur show is slated with a big surprise ready for all.

At the Diamond Airdome.

Individual members of the entertainers at the Diamond Airdome are worthy of mention. For instance Herbert Terry wins applause because of his own personality which is unassuming but nevertheless magnetic, so his monologue compels attention and people laugh at his nonsense. Casey, Jr., is a youngster who takes part in a sketch presented by LeClair and Casey, and he too comes in for a share of applause during the number. Miss McDonald, of the team of Huntington and McDonald, makes a fine appearance and sings and dances well. As for the Young Brothers, they are another good feature of the bill and their acrobatic feats present something new. Miss Diamond sings "Pansies" which is illustrated.

"Oh, Fred, how very shocked I am To see you reaching for the jam!" Said little Bess to teasing Fred— The luscious dish just o'er his head.

"But if you could but reach so far And hand me down the little jar, We'd have a feast, sir, Mister Fred— 'Cause I'd go bring Perfection Bread."

Care of Milk and Cream.

There are three systems of separating cream in general use. The first and oldest is known as the shallow pan system, the cream being separated by gravity acting upon a thin layer of milk. The second, known as the deep setting system, is dependent upon gravity acting upon a deeper mass of milk usually submerged or at least partially so, in cold water. The third method makes use of a machine exerting a centrifugal force and is known as the centrifugal or separator system.

The quality of the cream either for consumption or for manufacturing purposes is not affected one way or the other by either of these systems, but the quantity of cream obtained varies. In separating cream by force of gravity, there is a greater loss of fat and more time is required than when centrifugal separation is used. When milk is set for cream in shallow pans, the care is greater and more difficult than in either of the other systems. It is, however, the method generally in use where small quantities of butter are made. Strain the milk through cheese cloth immediately after milking and turn into perfectly clean pans, allowing a depth of from two to four inches. If running water is used to secure quick cooling and a more even temperature, the depth can be increased to even six inches. When the milk has set from twenty-four to thirty-six hours, take off the cream with a skimmer, gathering but little milk. Put in an earthen jar, set in a cool place, but not cool enough to freeze. The texture of the butter is largely influenced by the changes of temperature brought about during this ripening process. While it is not necessary that cream be ripened, its flavor is considerably better after this process. Where there is a large quantity of milk set at once it is rather better to keep each day's cream by itself, but for smaller amounts the results of two or three days' successive skimming can be put in the same jar, stirring thoroughly with each addition. Be particularly careful of dust in the room where the cream is set. Wipe tables, shelves and floors with damp cloths, instead of sweeping, and take pains that the atmosphere is kept free from any strong smelling substances. EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Fads for Women

An extremely smart yet practical toilet for a small girl might be a long, loose-fitting box coat of white brilliantine, closing double breasted, the neck finished with rolling collar and revers; coat sleeves might end in turn back cuffs, and there could be mannish looking pocket flaps. The side seams could be slit for several inches, and then all edges, collar, revers, pockets, cuffs, front and lower edges, also slits, could be hemmed with a flat silk braid. The hat, a mushroom shape, in white chip, could have a lining of shirred chiffon and a trimming of soft white ribbon "ruched" around the crown, the ends, weighted, falling at the left side.

As a hint to mothers who are contemplating making tub frocks for their "schoolgirl" daughters, I would suggest a "pleated skirt" model when practicable.

As a matter of fact, the pleats are much more becoming to undeveloped figures than the smooth cut, over the hips, and incidentally are more up to date.

The skirt may be pleated from the belt to below the hips evenly all the way around, or in groups, as considered more becoming to the wearer, or in the latter, though perhaps more trying style, a kilted dounce sewed to a fitted skirt.

The pine reaches a maximum age of seven hundred years; the silver fir, 425; the larch, 275; the red beech, 245; the aspen, 210; the birch, 200; the ash, 170; the elder, 145; and the elm, 130.

Vegetables as Medicines

According to the wisdom of our grandmothers, vegetables had medicinal properties. Asparagus was beneficial in kidney troubles, celery was sure cure for rheumatism and neuritis. The carrot formed blood and added to the velvety smoothness of the skin, beets and turnips kept the blood pure and improved the appetite; watercress, like asparagus, was good for the kidneys, and furthermore was stimulant to the mental faculties.

"Eat cress and learn wit," said the ancient Greeks. Lettuce was extremely beneficial for tired nerves and a lassitude peculiar to spring. Parsnips was an excellent tonic and cleared complexion, while the whole array, "greens"—mustard, cowslip, do horseradish, sorrel, dandelion, you best tops, rhubarb leaves and even stalks of milk weed were added with assurance to the springtime diet for the clearing of the blood, the regulating of the system and the removal of that "tired feeling" so closely associated with the vernal season.

Now that to our grandmothers' intuitive use of these products of nature's laboratory, we have added more definite scientific information to the chemical constituents, there is small excuse for continual dosing with drugs when the same remedial effect may be found in the much more attractive and palatable form presented to us in the vegetables and fruits. Do the system demand sulphur? We find it in turnips, onions, cabbage, cauliflower, watercress and horseradish.

The potato is rich in salts of potassium, French beans, lentils and rhubarb are iron. Watercress contains a sulphur, nitrogenous essential oil, iodine, phosphate and other salts, and spinach, iron, and salts of potassium in quantities that it deserves its French designation, "Broom of the stomach."

Goblets made of ice for use in weather originated in Holland, where they are widely used. This novel has been introduced in the United States and is used at a number of soda fountains in the larger cities of the eastern states. After removal from the molds the goblet is placed in cold storage. Of course, it can be used but once and is then "thrown away."—Soda Fountain Magazine.

American Women in Philippines Show Great Courage During Mutiny of Native Constabulary.

CUARTEL WHERE CONSTABULARY BROKE OUT.

CONVENT WHERE AMERICANS WERE BESIEGED.

TYPICAL VISAYAN AND BAGOBO NATIVES.

Manila, P. I., June 17.—The courage and coolness under fire of the American women at Davao during the siege of the convent in which Americans were gathered during the mutiny of June 6, when a part of a company of Philippine constabulary at that post revolted, is the subject of warm praise in a private message received today from Davao. The message contains further details of the affair.

After the attack in the barracks, which fell into the hands of the mutineers, all Americans of the post and sixteen of the native constabulary who remained loyal gathered in the convent and resisted the assaults of the mutineers. The women remained cool and fearless during the defence of the building. They assisted the men in every way possible, and even defied the mutineers.

Captain Allen Walker, of the Philippine scouts, governor of Davao province, was wounded during the attack on the church. The pursuit of the twenty-three mutineers, who retired to the mountains when their assaults on the convent proved unavailing, is under way. Two companies of constabulary will later join the pursuit of the mutineers, who are of the Visayan tribe.

Troops today are encircling the hills of Mindanao island in a determined effort to capture the native mutineers. Details of the mutiny show that the attacks on their officers were made unexpectedly by the mutineers. When the natives opened fire one officer, Degolcouria, was hit three times, but none of his wounds were serious. While Governor Walker and the officers of the company escaped without a scratch. The mutineers then fled to the hills after taking thirty rifles and five thousand rounds of ammunition.

Governor Walker hastily summoned the neighboring planters as soon as the mutineers were out of sight and proceeded to fortify a convent in preparation for a long siege. On account of the fire arm restriction most of the planters were armed only with revolvers. The natives attacked the convent on the afternoon of June 7, and fought with much spirit, but a sortie finally drove the mutineers away.

Beans, bean cake and bean oil are the principal products of Manchuria. The prices of these during the last season have been higher than ever before, but how much of this is due to the ability of Japan, a gold standard country, to pay more in silver, because silver has been cheap, can not be positively stated.

BURGLARS GET VERY LIGHT HAUL AT GRABILL

Robbery of Both Postoffice and Saloon Nets Them
Only $2.80.

Burglary of two business houses at Grabill, this county, Wednesday night netted the perpetrators but $2.80 as a reward for both their work and the risk of serving a penitentiary sentence. The places visited were the Grabill postoffice and the saloon recently opened in the little town by Lloyd Hursh.

Entrance in each case was gained by prying open rear windows, and the robbery was not discovered until the places were opened for the day's business this morning. No attempt was made to blow the postoffice safe, and about $2 in change was taken from an outside cash drawer. At the Hursh saloon only about 30 cents in cash was found.

There is no clue, but the robbery is believed to be a home-talent effort.

Weigh Yourself Before Using

Weigh yourself before commencing to use Samose, the great flesh-forming food. The wonderful sale on this preparation since first introduced in Fort Wayne, and the remarkable results following its use have made leading druggists such enthusiastic believers in the great value of Samose that they give their personal guarantee to refund the money if Samose will not make thin people fat and restore strength and health to those who use it.

This is a strong guarantee, but leading druggists have seen so many of their customers who a few weeks ago looked like walking skeletons become plump and well, solely through the use of Samose that they feel they cannot say too much to induce people to try it.

This marvelous flesh-forming food is assimilated as soon as it is taken into the stomach, makes good rich blood, tones up the weakened system, helps to assimilate the food and makes the user plump, well and rosy. For sale by Meyer Bros. Co. Sent post-paid on receipt of price, 50c.

THE CORINTHIAN FIVE, NATIONAL BOWLING CHAMPIONS.

New York, June 17.—From the standpoint of playing and sport, the big tournament of the National Bowling association, which was completed last week at the Garden, was a success. In the matter of attendance it was not what had been anticipated. The Corinthians of this city are the winners of the five-men championship. They secured the big prize of $1,000 and the diamond medals emblematic of their victory. The team was composed of William Linden, Louis Stein, Frank Reed, William Heins and the champion of Greater New York, "Jimmy" Smith. It is one of the strongest aggregations of expert bowlers in this city. The Corinthians won the championship in Atlantic City when the tournament of the National association was held at that resort.

BANKER MORSE NOW FREE MAN; OUT ON BAIL

Ex-Ice King, Trustmonger and High Financier is Out of Jail.

New York, June 17.—Charles W. Morse, convicted banker, was released on bail yesterday pending the taking up of his appeal, in the United States circuit court of appeals next October. For nearly four months Morse will be free to go and come as he pleases. At the end of that time the court of appeals will either order a new trial or affirm the sentence of fifteen years imprisonment imposed upon the former ice king in November of last year. The bail bond for $125,000 was signed late yesterday afternoon by twenty wealthy friends of Morse, who volunteered for this service several months ago, and Morse quit the custody of the United States marshal shortly before 6 o'clock.

"I am very glad for this," he said to the little group of friends who gathered about him in the federal building to offer their congratulations. "Busy Time Ahead."

"And now I have a busy four months before me." I am going straight to my home and take care of myself and my wife. There is a little planning to be done and we expect to go to the country for a short time until I can think it all out. Then I shall get back here and climb into the harness to pull all the tangled threads together again."

The order of the court admitting Morse to bail came as something of a surprise to his wife and friends when it was handed down at noon yesterday. They had been working for his release since the early part of the year, but there had been no indication that a response to their petitions would be given at once.

Mrs. Morse was with her husband in the Tombs when the news was received there and she spent one of the busiest afternoons of her life marshalling her husband's friends and obtaining their signatures to the necessary papers in time to bring his release before sunset. When the last signature was approved by the court she smilingly conducted an impromptu reception in the federal building, receiving with her husband the congratulations of many friends.

Friends Responsible for Release. Morse's release came largely through the activity of twenty-five of his friends, who petitioned the court in May, saying they believed in his innocence and were ready to become responsible upon a bail bond for an indefinite sum. The signatures include Frank A. Munsey, Augustus Van Wyck, John D. Crummins, Oakleigh Thorne and other prominent New York bankers and business men.

The court's order was as follows: "In view of the magnitude of the record and the number and intricacy of the questions presented in this appeal, the proper consideration of which will require extended examination, we order and direct that the defendant be enlarged upon bail until the second Monday in October upon filing a bail bond in the sum of $125,000, executed by responsible persons, who shall state that they have not received and will not receive indemnity. The bond to be conditioned that the defendant shall not leave the United States."

Morse was convicted of having misappropriated the funds of his former chief bank, the National Bank of North America, in financial operations which led to his being thrown into bankruptcy early in 1908. He was sentenced to fifteen years in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga. Since this conviction he has been in the Tombs. Attempts to have him admitted to bail have extended over a period of seven months.

SEEING AND LISTENING.

Nearsighted Man Wears Glasses in Talking, but not in Reading.

"Here's a sort of queer thing," said a near-sighted man. "I am very near-sighted. Strong glasses are indispensable to me for ordinary, general seeing in my going about, but when I sit down to read I take off my glasses and bring the print up to within the natural focus of the eye. It seems to me that reading with the natural eye, I read with a more intimate and a clearer understanding."

"So much for my reading without spectacles, and now here is the thing that is queer to me. If, when I am reading, somebody comes along to speak to me, why, then to get a clear understanding of that question I must have on my spectacles."

"So I say, or I would say if this happened at home where I know the people, 'Wait a minute till I get on my spectacles, and I would put them on and then say, 'Now, go ahead,' and really, with my spectacles on, with my power of seeing at its best, with the sharpest definition of things in general to the eye, I get the clearest apprehension of things said to me."

"So in reading I do best with my glasses off, but in understanding things said to me, in listening, I do best with my glasses on. There is one modification to this—where there is no light, as in a dark room, where I can't see, I can understand equally well with or without glasses."

Stops Dog Barking.

My pointer used to annoy the family by barking at night, often for no other reason than that other dogs in the neighborhood were barking. I had an electric gong placed in his kennel and the wires strung straight up from the roof of the kennel to a shade tree and then to my bedroom. The push-button is on the wall close to the head of my bed and if the dog barks when I think he should be still, I press the button and he shuts up. This is how we trained him he should be quiet when the bell rang. I waited inside the side door of the house, with all the lights in the house out. When the barking commenced my brother rang the bell and I went out and gave the dog a scolding and a couple of cuts with the dog-whip, then returned to the house. I had to go out three times the first evening and twice the next, but since then the bell has served its purpose; in fact, it has practically cured this dog of uncalled-for barking.—J. V. Travis.

Pens of Price.

The pen used by Charles Dickens just before his death, which has been sold at Messrs. Sotheby's rooms for £19 10s, must yield the palm of costliness to the well worn gold pen, used by "Boz" for many years, which found a purchaser some time ago for over £40. At the same of the Dalhousie collection a quill pen used by Wellington when writing to Queen Victoria in 1844 brought only 5 1-2 guineas; while one of Sir Walter Scott's pens, selected by Lord Dalhousie in 1829 from Scott's writing table at Abbotsford, only realized three guineas more. Among the most valuable pens in the world are one owned by Isaac Reed, of New York, carved from a portion of George Washington's lens box, and used by Lincoln when President, and the quill of a golden eagle's wing, the property of the Empress Eugenie, with which the Treaty of Paris was signed in 1856.

Campers' Charcoal Furnace.

Every camper should have a deep tin or sheetiron bucket with a flat cover to use as a charcoal furnace in the tent on cold nights and rainy days. A row of small holes around the side, about two inches from the bottom to the line of holes with broken stone or sand. Make it a rule to scatter the embers every time an open fire is used, and gather this charcoal in the bucket and keep dry. Cooking can be done in the tent free from smoke, and when a gentle heat all night is desired, put on the cover, leaving a small opening for draught. With this heater any camper can be comfortable, even under the most adverse circumstances.—C. J. C.

INDIANA REGIMENTS IN WAR.

Col. Sam B. Sweet Reads Paper Before Indianapolis Veterans.

Indianapolis, June 17.—An interesting feature of the regular meeting of George H. Thomas post, G. A. R., last night, was a paper by Sam B. Sweet, of the Forty-fourth Indiana Infantry, who reviewed the regimental organizations which Indiana has contributed in defense of the flag since it became a recognized part of the union. It is a coincidence that the first regiment raised in the state fought on foreign soil, and so did the last; the first in the Mexican war, and the last in the Spanish-American conflict.

Incidentally, Mr. Sweet referred to the disgrace which befell Indiana in the battle of Buena Vista, when, through the incompetency of the colonel commanding (Bowles), and possibly his cowardice, the regiment was compelled to retreat in disorder. During the war of the rebellion Bowles became a prominent leader in a treacherous conspiracy, known as the Knights of the Golden Circle, for which he was tried by court-martial, convicted and sentenced to be executed, but he was afterward pardoned by the president. It was a part of history, however, that a part of the regiment refused to be stampeded, and it joined a Missouri regiment commanded by Jeff Davis, and fought throughout the day with great gallantry. Mr. Sweet also gave at length the regimental organizations which represented Indiana in the great conflict between the states, as well as participating in the Spanish-American skirmish. Throughout the paper was informative and interesting.

IN THE CHURCHES

Episcopal Choir Concert.
Not a vacant seat was to be found last evening in the parish house of Trinity Episcopal church during the concert given by the choir. The concert was under the management of the organist, Frederick G. Church, and the small admission charged will be used in defraying expenses of the annual camping expedition which the choir expects to have this summer. The program presented considerable variety. The choir sang four numbers in good pitch, with great enthusiasm and vigor and hardly a hint of dragging the time, which considering the accompaniment was a piano and violin, only, was quite remarkable. However dragging is never characteristic of the work of Trinity choir though to prevent such possibility Mr. Church sometimes takes too rapid a tempo. Other numbers of the program were a soprano solo by Master Paul Bachelor, who has a pretty, true and very high voice, a violin and flute arrangement with piano accompaniment by Mr. Banks and Mr. Averill, a baritone solo by Horace Jones, whose voice is very pleasing, a piano solo by Miss Ethel Whitney, who displays much talent, two pretty songs by Miss Eliza Hanna, which were especially well interpreted, and a baritone solo by George Geake, who has a beautiful voice. Every number of the program was encoored and the concert was a credit to all who took part in it.

Foundation is Ready.

The foundation for the new church for the St. John's Lutheran congregation in Lake township is practically completed and the brick masons will soon begin their work. Considerable difficulty is experienced in transporting the bricks to the site of the new church.

The Third Presbyterian Bible school is preparing an elaborate program for children's day exercises to be held on Sunday evening at 7:45 o'clock.

Next Sunday will be Children's day

There will be an exhibition of stereopticon slides at Grace Reformed church tomorrow evening for the children, from Ernest Seton Thompson's bird life studies. There will be entertainment for the children after the pictures have been shown.

The ladies of Grace Reformed church will conduct a sale of homemade baking all day Saturday at the Union Pacific tea store.

Mrs. Harriet Riblett, of 2409 Harrison street, will be hostess for the Ladies' Missionary society tomorrow afternoon. A special program of interest has been prepared by Mrs. McKeehan and the hour is 2:30.

Social at Third Church.

A general social of all members and friends of the Third Presbyterian church will be held tomorrow evening in the church parlors. This social is especially for an opportunity for the new members of the church to become acquainted with other members of the church.

At Grace Reformed Church.

The stereopticon exhibit of birds and bird life at the Grace Reformed church tomorrow evening will include the finest slides that can be obtained on this subject as they are made from pictures taken by Ernest Seton Thompson. Hundreds of birds will be shown and there will be some recitations and readings by the children afterwards. There will also be an ice cream and candy stand. It will be an evening for the children and everybody else interested. A small admittance of five cents will be charged to meet the expense of the slides.

Would You Convict on Circumstantial Evidence?

"A TANGLED CASE"—A TRUE STORY.

This week's story deals with a remarkable series of disappearances all occurring on the same night in a sparsely settled rural community under such peculiar circumstances as to set the whole village wild with curiosity.

The body of one of the missing men is discovered in the mill pond a few days later by a quaint, half simple character of the neighborhood. The investigations that result bring to light many circumstances that look bad for a young attorney and his sweetheart who had had a disagreement with the apparently murdered man.

The arrest of the young couple and another man who had a sinister reputation, for complicity in the murder, follows.

The confession of the latter implicates the young man but absolves the young woman. The two men are convicted and the date for their execution set. The heroine leaves no stone unturned to prove her lover's innocence. Failing to find any loophole in the evidence she turns her batteries on the confessed murderer to tell the truth. Her charms are hard to resist. The execution is carried out in part. And then discoveries are made that seem to indicate that no crime has been committed. Can you beat it?

Mrs. Sage, who is characterized as "the greatest woman philanthropist," and her methods of carrying out the stupendous task of giving away an immense fortune, a task all the greater because of her age, eighty-one years, are fully described in this very interesting article.

It is easy to talk in millions when the name of Sage is mentioned, but this will show just what the widow of the financier has done in three years with $20,000,000.

"THE FANCY DRESS BALL."

By Arabella Kenney.

Pamela had decided to attend the fancy dress ball in the character of "My Great Grandmother." While busily engaged in dressing for the part she discovered a piece of parchment concealed in the lining of the gown which had belonged to her great-grandmother. Opening it she read: "To my beloved Ursula de Lisle London, in token of my undying affection, I bequeath the whole of my unentailed monies and property."

(Signed) "JOHN HERRIES."

The document was duly witnessed by a justice of the peace and another. It was dated "July the twentieth, 1803."

A postscript was added by the legatee which shed much light on the romance which follows.

The story from then on deals with the matrimonial designs of a very agreeable young man and his fiancée who has a habit of expressing her opinions freely no matter what the consequences.

Pamela is not so outspoken, however, and has charms all her own. All this has an unlooked-for effect on the course of true love with the result that "Pam" is favorite in the race.

Johnny was getting worst, when his friends, the Van Cluck Twins, came to the rescue, which only postponed the issue, for they deserted him when their adversaries resorted to mud-slinging tactics.

Danderine

and we can PROVE IT!

Beautiful Hair at Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions).

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities. One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

FREE To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO., CHICAGO, ILL., with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

UNCLE ELI'S FABLES.

Wherein to the Tail of Each Is Tied a Moral.

STORY OF THE LIMPING ASS.

The Peasant and His Son, Whose Good Intentions Were Brought to Naught. The Fox, the Coon and the Pullet That Wasn't Wise.

(Copyright, 1909, by T. C. McClure.)

ONE day after having grazed his fill the Camel started down to the water hole to quench his thirst. He was feeling balmy and complacent, and as he walked along he commended to himself: "Ah, it is good to be a Camel! There's a hump on my back that any animal in the world might be proud of, and the party that says my neck is not as graceful as that of the Swan is a horse thief and a liar!" He had not yet reached the water when he met the Giraffe, who was also feeling that he was the it. The

"YOU HAVE RUINED MY WATCH!" two animals surveyed each other for a moment, and then the Camel said: "Eh! You are still carrying your fore legs around with you, I see?" "What about my fore legs?" was demanded.

"Why, they make you look like a rail fence with props under it." "Look here, you old critter with a hump! It is not for you to criticize such as me. The sight of you would scare a rabbit off his legs."

Then followed criticism and abuse until the Wolf came along and butted in and claimed he was the only animal in the forest resembling the American Beauty rose. The Camel and the Giraffe immediately proceeded to tell him how the world looked upon him, and hot words were flying around when the Rhinoceros came up and said:

"Gentlemen, these unseemly expressions should cease. It was decided long ago that I am the only thing in the forest worth looking at."

The three others at once called his attention to his ungainly shape, awkward movements, pig eyes and scant tail, and the row grew fiercer than ever. A battle was imminent when the Elephant put in an appearance, and after listening for a moment he observed:

"Well, upon my soul, but this is funny! Who has my bulk? Who has my strength? Who has my agility? Can any of you tear down trees and kill hunters? Let me advise you in a fatherly way to cut it out."

A row with the Elephant was on the carpet when the Wolf happened to look upward and saw the Owl seated on a limb, and he at once called out: "Peace, peace. Let us leave it to the Owl to decide."

"Well, gentlemen," replied the Owl after a few blinks, "the case seems to be an easy one. Behold my plumage! Gaze into these eyes! Remember the wisdom with which I am credited: Why, when I hear such common critters as you disputing about which stands at the head of the class?"

Moral.—Each and every one of us is all right, but the trouble is to get the other fellow to admit it.

The Limping Ass.

One day as the Ass had stopped on the highway while his master entered a saloon to get a glass of beer the Horse came along and halted to say:

"The load you are drawing is altogether too much for you." "Yes, I think so myself," replied the Ass, "but my master seems to have no feelings."

"How many oats do you get at a feed?"

"Two quarts."

"You ought to have four. What day do you get off?"

"No day, except Sunday."

"That's a shame. You ought to have at least half of every Saturday. How often does the master grease the cart?"

"Only when it creaks so that it is a nuisance to his ears."

"Tut! I see. And doesn't he push when you are going uphill?"

"Not a push. On the contrary, he ples the gad the harder."

"Well," observed the Horse, "it's a hard case, but you alone are to blame for it. If, for instance, when you start from here you should be taken with a limp the master would have to take at least half the load off the cart and go easy on you. You can see that, I reckon?"

"Of course, and I'll put it in practice. What an idiot I am not to have thought of it before!"

The Horse passed on with a feeling that he had done his duty, and as the master came out with a "Gee up!" the Ass made a few steps forward and then fell dead lame. His feet were lifted to see if he had picked up a stone on the road, and after spending fifteen minutes in seeking to discover the cause of the lameness the master hired another Ass to draw the load home and let his beast limp behind. When they had reached the barn the lame one whinnied for his feed. None was forthcoming. At last he raised his voice and cried out:

"Master, you seem to have forgotten me, and I am hungry." "Oh, no; I remember you all right," was the reply.

"Is it, then, that the feed is out?"

"Not at all. It is that you were taken with a limp and I lost the benefit of your services. Your feed is pay for your work. No work, no feed."

Moral.—One may not be satisfied with his lot, but he can always make it worse for himself.

The Peasant and His Son.

Upon his return from town one day the Peasant brought a book with him, and, handing it to his little son, he said:

"My son, it is well to know what others think and say. Read this book and try to be guided and benefited by its precepts."

Two weeks later the old man came in from his corn boeing and said to the boy:

"Jinnus, I have not seen that watch of mine around for many days, and I fear that I have lost it in the fields."

"Oh, no, father; I can tell you where it is," was the reply.

Thereupon the lad led the way to the garden and with a hoe dug up the watch from the soil wherein it was buried.

"Dolt! Idiot! Ass! You have ruined my watch!" exclaimed the father as he took it in his hand.

"But I was only following the precepts laid down in the book you so kindly gave me," was the reply.

"But that cannot be."

"But yet it is so, as you can read for yourself. It says that a seed planted will produce fivefold, and if we had left this watch a few days longer we should have been able to dig up a couple of clocks."

Moral.—The difference between theory and practice has brought many good intentions to naught.

The Fox, the Coon and the Pullet.

One day as the Fox was prowling around a barnyard he discovered a fine, fat pullet seated on the limb of a tree out of reach. He asked her to come down that he might tell her some news, and when this failed he resorted to threats. Knowing that he could not climb the tree after her, the Pullet bade him defiance, and Reynard seemed to have given over when the Coon came along and said:

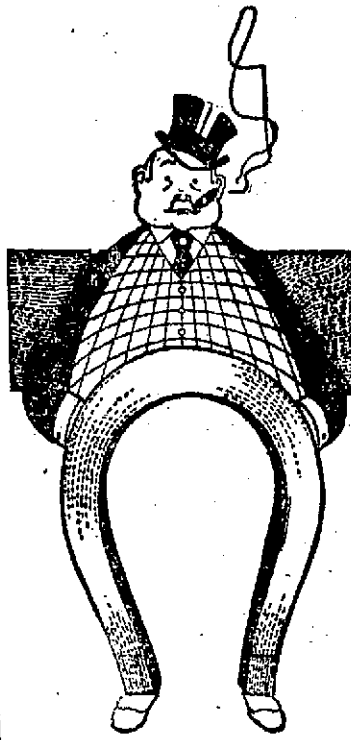

"You are awfully cute, Mr. Fox, but you might as well let go in this case. You have tried deceit, hypocrisy, threats and cajolery, but none of them has worked."

"That is true," replied the Fox, "but I have a weapon in reserve. Watch my smoke."

And thereupon he began praising the pullet's plumage, her eyes, her small feet and her plumpness, and ten minutes later she came down from the tree and was eaten.

Day's Happenings in the Industrial World

EX-FORT WAYNE BOY SUPERVISED THE CONSTRUCTION

Largest Engine in World is Built Under Direction of W. B. Gaskins.

At the head of this department today is a picture of Southern Pacific engine No. 4000, one of two of the largest engines in the world, which was built under the personal supervision of W. B. Gaskins, the superintendent of motive power of the S. P., for heavy service in the mountainous districts through which that line runs. This engine is of the Mallet compound pattern and in its construction power was the desideratum, though the item of speed was not lost sight of. It has been in service several months and it is said that it performs well, more than meeting the expectations of the builders and the people for whom it was built. The engine and tender are 96 feet 8 inches long and their combined weight is 600,000 pounds. The engine alone weighs 430,000 pounds, of which 30,000 pounds rests upon the drivers. There are eight pairs of drivers and four cylinders, arranged in two groups with four pairs of drivers and one pair of cylinders each. The drivers have a diameter of 57 inches, the high pressure cylinders a diameter of 20 inches and the low pressure cylinders a diameter of 40 inches and each has a 2-inch stroke. The diameter of the boiler, inside measurement, is 84 inches and when in operation it carries a steam pressure of 200 pounds. The engine is said to be a more accurate idea of the immensity of this locomotive if they will consider the fact that "Fat Anna," a Pennsylvania passenger engine in service on this vision a year ago and the largest engine ever seen in Fort Wayne, weighs, engine and tender combined, 17,000 pounds, about 188,000 pounds less than does the Southern Pacific engine under discussion.

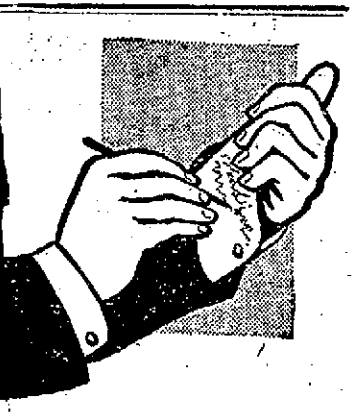

The picture represents Supt. W. B. Gaskins standing at the front of the engine, head and a short distance back of the pilot. The other persons shown in the picture are Mr. Gaskins' family associates.

Mr. Gaskins, who was born and raised in Fort Wayne, has had quite an interesting railway career. He earned his trade and was employed awhile as a machinist in the Wash shops in this city, commencing work there in 1888 and resigning to go to Chicago in 1890 on account of poor health. He went to Fort Worth, Tex., where he lived and later ran an engine on the F. W. & D. C. road awhile and then entered the shops, first as a gangman and later as assistant master mechanic. Thence he made several changes, including motive power superintendent of the Pecos Valley and Northwestern at Roswell, N. M.; master mechanic at Cape Girardeau, Mo.; the Frisco System; master mechanic Sedalia, Mo., of the Missouri Pacific, and thence to Sparks, Nev., his present location, as motive power superintendent of the Western division of the Southern Pacific.

ST. PAUL'S EXTENSION.

Chicago and Puget Sound Cities Now Connected by Rail.

Final announcement was made yesterday that the first transcontinental road ever built through from Chicago to the Pacific coast under one management, the 1,400-mile extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul line, is now ready for business. The final notice was contained in a telegram from President A. J. Barling, who resided in Seattle. "The Puget Sound line is now ready to receive freight all kinds to all points on its line," he first consignment from Chicago to Seattle was started yesterday on its 145th journey.

INVESTIGATING BALLAST.

Pennsy Inaugurates Tests to Determine Best Material.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company has installed apparatus at South Altoona to test the bearing qualities of the different kinds of roadway and ballast. The particular ballast for subgrading is to be tested by placing it in a heavy box that extends across the track and has sufficient depth to serve the purpose. The track crosses this on a level and extends out on either side, terminating in a short and sharp incline. The four-wheel car on this track is loaded with pig metal to attain any desired weight on the wheels. This car is also equipped with an electric motor. A shed built across the tracks carries an overhead rail from which a motor current is obtained and a contact shoe is on the car. When the current is turned on the car moves out to the end of the conductor rail and here, as the contact is broken, the power of the motor is cut off.

CALLED THE TURN ON ALLEN.

Prediction That He Was on Wedding Trip Verified.

When Charles T. Allen, a tallyman at the Wash freight house, went to Monroe, Mich., Tuesday a comrade predicted that he was going there to be married and subsequent developments have verified that prediction. Mr. Allen "fessed" up yesterday afternoon, when he appeared at the warehouse with a box of cigars for the boys. The bride was Mrs. Theresa C. Brown, of 201 Grand street, and the wedding took place in Monroe, as predicted, the bride and groom returning here Wednesday. They will reside at the former home of the bride at the number mentioned.

RUMORS OF CHANGES.

A persistent rumor has been on for three or four days to the effect that Jay S. Vervain has tendered his resignation as general yardmaster of the Nickel Plate at this point and, while it lacks official confirmation, it is believed in Nickel Plate circles to be true. Mr. Vervain has been acting for several weeks and to this is attributed the alleged desire to relinquish the arduous duties of the position he holds. He may resume a conductorship on the road or he may go elsewhere in the hope that the change will be beneficial to his health. The Bellevue Gazette says that "the name of a Bellevue employee of the company is prominently mentioned in connection with the appointment of a successor to the general yardmaster at Fort Wayne." In answer to an inquiry Mr. Vervain said he was still an employee of the Nickel Plate.

The organization of the company and the personnel of the official roster has been previously published.

PUTTING ON NEW ASPHANS.

All Wabash engines that are taken into the shop for repairs are equipped with a new styled ashpans which is made to comply with the law effective January 1, 1910, and so far about twenty have been equipped. Like the Pennsylvania ashpans, this pan is operated from the side of the engine and obviates the necessity of going beneath the locomotive to empty the ashes.

LIKES FORT WAYNE BEST.

Henry L. Brahler took a position in the Pennsylvania fuel shop this morning. For five or six years he was employed in the steel works in Hammond, but learning that he could probably get a position in the Pennsylvania shops, he resigned last week and came here. Mr. Brahler's parents reside here and this was his home up to the time he took a position at Hammond. He says Fort Wayne is the best city to live in.

SHOP CLERKS AND STOREKEEPERS.

C. E. Young, assistant shop clerk of the Panhandle at Columbus, A. Miller, storekeeper at Denison, Ohio; C. E. McLaughlin, shop clerk at Indianapolis, and A. P. Richardson, shop clerk at Wellesville, were here this morning conferring with the Pennsylvania motive power officials on matters of business.

REPRESENTATIVE TO REPORT.

B. E. O'Leary, who represented Fort Wayne lodge, No. 136, B. R. T., at the biennial convention of the brotherhood at Columbus, will make his report of the proceedings of that body at a meeting tomorrow evening. Master Ferguson is anxious to have a good attendance on that occasion. There will also be some other important business before the meeting.

TO CLOSE FOR INVENTORY.

The semi-annual inventory of stock in the Wabash shops and yards will be taken Thursday, July 1, and in order that it may proceed uninterrupted instructions have been issued to close the shops to operation on that day. Representatives of the auditing department will be here to do the work, assisted by the local supply department attaches and shop clerks.

G. R. & I. PAY CAR.

The G. R. & I. pay car will arrive in Fort Wayne Saturday morning in time to pay the employees before the noon hour. The distribution of earnings for May will exceed that of a year ago.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Robert Cran, Jr., machinist, went to Chicago today on a visit with friends. Samuel S. Deahl, Nickel Plate conductor, is taking a lay off to attend to some private business. W. E. Zart and F. M. Kling have gone to Little Rock, Ark., to look after some business for S. F. Bowser & Co. R. R. Hoch resumed work in the Pennsylvania copper shop this morning. He had been in Philadelphia a month.

L. Case, Wabash boilermaker, will go to Huntington tomorrow night to spend Saturday and Sunday with relatives.

Foreman Frank Benoy, of the Bass boiler shop, went to Jonesboro, Ind., this morning on business for the company.

J. Schmidt, E. H. Stephan, G. W. Adams, H. D. Nelzer, Frank Schaffer and G. W. Hornmann, Pennsylvania shopmen, are sick and off duty.

Foreman M. W. Kemp, of the lumber department of the Pennsylvania, left at noon yesterday for Altoona, Pa., on business for the company.

N. J. Murphy, machinist at the Wabash shops, and his family left last night for Logansport, where they attended the funeral of a relative today.

H. W. G. Heine, Pennsylvania boiler-maker, had two toes painfully bruised while at work in the shop Tuesday and will not be able to work for a week.

Boilermaker Henry Geerken, of the Bass shops, has obtained a thirty days' leave of absence for the purpose of looking after some business matters and visiting relatives out of the city.

Charles Cherry, Jr., who had been off duty on account of the sickness of his mother, resumed work at the testing room at the Pennsylvania power station this morning. Mrs. Cherry is improving.

H. Blocker resigned a position in the Pennsylvania erecting shop yesterday and this morning the place thus vacated was filled by W. A. Stockbridge, a freshman from Purdue, who will work during the vacation term.

The McKeesport Tinplate company announces that it will expend $2,000,000 in constructing ten new mills this summer. The company has just purchased two acres of land adjoining its plant.

W. H. Shoemaker has been transferred from the armature department to the testing room at the Electric works. Mr. Tucker, recently from the east, is also a new man in the testing room to take a student's course.

A number of the ladies at the Electric works have volunteered to serve as table attendants at the ice cream social of the volunteer firemen of the Fort Wayne Electric works at Sweeney park tomorrow evening.

Al Fromuth, who is now located at Dayton, O., is here to spend a day or two with friends, after an absence of two years. He was once an inspector in the testing rooms of the Electric works in this city and he spent several hours with the boys at that institution yesterday.

The Electric works are being operated in part overtime at present. The fan motor department is particularly busy and cannot meet the demand without extra efforts. Fan motors are being used more and more each year and many private residences are now equipped with them.

In making mention of the Rome City cottagers' train which goes into service for the season tomorrow, the city papers erred in the time of departure from Rome City on the trip to Fort Wayne. The train will leave the resort at 6:55 instead of 7 o'clock in the morning, and will arrive here at 7:50, making the run in fifty-five minutes. Agent W. H. Shorey, of the Wabash, has been advised that the Wabash will for the balance of the summer make a Sunday round trip rate, all rail, to Detroit of $2.50, good going on the early train and returning on any train out of Detroit Sunday evening, including the No. 9, which leaves that city at 1:30 a. m. and arrives here at 5:18 Monday morning.

The St. Paul and the Northwestern roads are preparing to put ticket collectors, or "train auditors," as they are pleased to call them, on all passenger trains. This move is made to check alleged speculations of some of the collectors. Very few lines in the country have ticket collectors now, though they were quite common some years ago.

Secretary J. W. Burns, of the Railroad Y. M. C. A., spends a portion of his spare time in the cultivation of flowers, of which he is a great admirer. As a result, he is able to distribute them among his friends and at times has a half-dozen or so of roses wrapped in a handkerchief and carried in his pocket to give to the friends he meets on the street.

A WAY OUT OF IT.

Why George Did Not Go to Johnny Burton's Party.

A N east end small boy of Cleveland had something to say to his father at the dinner table the other night.

"Papa," he said, "Johnnie Burton is going to have a party nex' week, an' he said he'd invite me. An' I got to take a present."

"A present? What's that for?" "It's for Johnnie's birthday. All the kids take presents."

Things hadn't gone just right during the day with the boy's father. He was not in an agreeable humor.

"That's all nonsense," he declared. "Every day or two it's a present here or a present there. If you can't go to a party without taking a present you might as well stay home."

The boy's lip trembled, but he made no reply.

The next day the father regretted his hasty words and that night turned to the boy.

"George," he said, "there are a couple of new books in my overcoat pocket. You can take them to your friend Johnnie's party."

"It's too late," said George gloomily. "I licked him today so he wouldn't invite me."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Deserter.

"Do you desire to have it understood," asked the judge, addressing the lady who wanted the divorce, "that your husband deserted you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Please tell the court as concisely as you can how he deserted you."

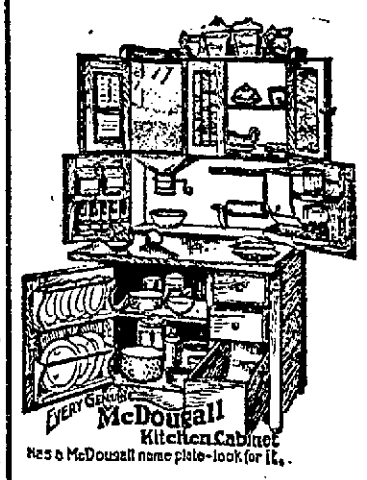

"Two months after we had completed our wedding trip he scolded me because he thought I was extravagant in the matter of getting clothes, and I went home to my people."

"Yes, proceed."

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S UNDERSTUDY

WAIT a moment, Peter," Miss Ethel called from the veranda as he was starting for the village with the daily marketing list. "I want you to drive around by Red Towers on your way home and leave this note for Mrs. Booth-Higby."

"Very well, Miss Ethel," Peter replied in Tricky and received the note with a polite pull at his hat brim.

"And, Peter, you might use a little discretion. I don't want her to know."

"You trust me, Miss Ethel. I'll fix it." Her eyes met his for a second and she laughed. Peter's face also relaxed its official gravity as he pocketed the note and started off. He knew all about the matter, Miss Ethel and her mother having discussed it through the length of a seven-mile drive, while he kept his eyes on the road in front, but listened assiduously.

The note was an invitation to a garden party with the Daughters of the Revolution as guests of honor and private theatricals as entertainment, the star performer to be a young Irish earl who was visiting Mr. Harry Jasper next door. The two households formed an exclusive party among themselves, and as yet no one else in the neighborhood had met the distinguished foreigner. Miss Ethel was reserving him for a spectacular debut on the evening of the garden party.

The question so thoroughly discussed on the drive had been whether or not Mrs. Booth-Higby should be included. Mrs. Carter had said firmly that since she was a member of the society, not to invite her would be no open a slight. Miss Ethel had replied that the party was purely a social affair; she could invite whom she pleased, and she had added some pointed details; the woman's maiden name, as everyone knew, was Maggie McGarragh, and her father, previous to his political career, had kept a saloon; she was odious, pushing, nouveau riche, she dyed her hair and penciled her eyebrows; she didn't have a thought in the world beyond clothes, and she flirted outrageously with every man who came near. Peter's smile had broadened at this last item. It was, he shrewdly suspected, the keynote of the trouble. Miss Ethel had caught Mr. Harry Jasper paying too much attention to the lady in question.

The contest had awakened Peter's sporting instincts; he felt that when Mrs. Carter and her daughter matched wits the result was even betting. Accordingly, upon delivering the invitation, he had noted with interest that there was none for Mrs. Booth-Higby; and now his interest was doubly keen at receiving it three days late. Miss Ethel had been vanquished after all.

He turned in between the ornate gates of Red Towers—the two posts surmounted by lions upholding a mythical coat of arms—and drew up in the shadow of an imposing porte-cochere.

A gay group of ladies and gentlemen were gathered in lounging chairs engaged with frosted glasses of mint julep, and Mrs. Booth-Higby herself rose and sauntered toward him amidst a voluminous rustle of draperies.

"Whose man are you?" she inquired with an air of languid condescension.

Peter's face reddened slightly. The entire group had ceased their conversation to stare.

"Mr. Jerome Carter's," he replied, fumbling for the note.

Her eyebrows lifted slightly. It was evident that she knew about the garden party and had entertained emotions over the absence of her own invitation.

"It should have come three days ago," Peter glibly lied, "Miss Carter, she gave me a lot to deliver, an' this one slipped down the crack between the cushions an' got overlooked. We come across it this mornin' when we was washin' the buckboard, so I stopped on my way home from the marketin'. I hope that ain't important an' that ye won't feel called upon to tell Miss Carter. It would get me into trouble, ma'am."

Her anger had evidently been excessive and she worked it off now in a reprimand which Peter meekly swallowed, but with a cordial assent to Miss Ethel's description of her character. She ended by bidding him wait for an answer.

"An' she's a daughter o' Tim McGarragh!" he repeated to himself. "She's ashamed of him now an' won't let on she ever heard the name, but the old man was ten times more a gentleman than she is a lady for all his saloon."

When she returned twenty minutes later her air was more lenient. "There are to be theatricals?" she inquired in a note of forgiveness.

"I believe so, ma'am."

"Is Lord Kiscadden to take part?"

"Can't say, ma'am." As scene shifter, Peter had had ample opportunity to study Lord Kiscadden's interpretation of the character of George Washington—his lordship with a fine sense of humor had himself selected the role—but at mention of the name, Peter's face was blank.

"Is he to remain much longer at Jasper Place?" she persisted.

"Haven't heard him say, ma'am."

She abandoned her pursuit of news, handed him the note, and graciously added ten cents.

Peter touched his hat gravely, murmured "Thank ye, ma'am," and drove away. At the foot of the lawn the Booth-Higby peacock—a decoration for the Italian garden, but given to wandering out of bounds—trailed its plumage across the drive. Peter shied his ten cents at the bird's head, with the muttered wish that the coin had been large enough really to accomplish damage.

On the day of the garden party Peter worked hard. He superintended the raising of a support tent on the lawn, strung colored electric bulbs among the branches of the trees, saw the furniture moved out of the drawing room and three hundred camp chairs moved in. He spent the afternoon shifting scenery for the dress rehearsal; but finally, close upon six, he shoved Plymouth Rock into place for the first tableau, and with a sigh of relief turned toward the kitchen. He felt that he had earned a fifteen minutes' chat with the new parlor maid.

But fresh trouble awaited him. He found Mrs. Carter and the cook in anxious consultation. The ice cream had not come; and the expressman, who had already met three trains, said that he could not deliver it now until morning. Mrs. Carter pounced upon Peter.

"Is Miss Ethel through with you? Then drive to the station immediately and meet the six-twenty train. If it isn't on that, stop at Gunther's and tell them they will have to make me nine gallons of ice cream before ten o'clock tonight. It's disgraceful! I shall never engage Perry to cater again. And tell the expressman that I consider him very disloyal." She threw after him.

An hour and a half later he dumped three kegs of ice and brine on the back veranda, and was turning away cheered by the hope of his long postponed supper, when Annie hailed him from the kitchen window.

"Hey, Pete! Wait a minute! Miss Ethel said as soon as you got back for me to send you into the library."

"What are they wantin' now?" he growled. "I'll be glad when that bloomin' young lord takes himself home to Ireland where he belongs. Between picnics an' ridin' parties an' clambakes an' theatricals, I ain't had a chance to sit down since he come."

Annie showed a chair toward him. "Then sit down now, for he's gone! A telegram come callin' him away, an' Mr. Harry's just back from motorin' him to the station."

"Praise be to the saints!" said Peter as he turned toward the library door. He found Miss Ethel and Mr. Harry Jasper conversing regarding the huge gauze screen that stretched across the front of the stage.

"Here he is!" cried Miss Ethel with a fresh assumption of energy. "Put on this hat and wig, Peter, and go back of the stage and stand. I want to see what you look like."

Peter apathetically complied. He had received so many extraordinary commands during the past few days that nothing stirred his curiosity.

"Bully!" said Mr. Harry. "Never'd know him in the world."

"We'll lower the lights," said Miss Ethel. "Fortunately the gauze is thick."

"Peter" (Mr. Harry faced him with an air of tragic portent), "a grave calamity has befallen the state. The rightful heir has disappeared and it's imperative that we find a substitute. I've often remarked what a striking resemblance there is between you and Lord Kiscadden. In that lies our only hope. It's a situation that often occurs in novels. Do you think it might be carried out in real life?"

"Can't say, sir," Peter blinked dazedly.

"Be sensible, Harry!" Miss Ethel silenced him.

"Peter, Lord Kiscadden has been called away and it spoils our tableaux for this evening. Fortunately, he didn't have a speaking part. You've watched him rehearse—do you think you could take his place?"

"I don't believe so, ma'am." Peter's tone was not enthusiastic.

"You'll have to do it!" Miss Ethel's tone was firm. "It's too late now to find anyone else."

"You're George Washington?" Mr. Harry cut in.

"Father of his country. Only man on earth who never told a lie. No one will recognize you in that part, Peter."

"Here are the clothes," Miss Ethel bundled them into his arms. "You saw Lord Kiscadden this af-from the corner of his mouth. His appearance suggested a very rakish caricature of the immortal first President. The maids were gathered in a giggling group about the young man, when Miss Ethel and Mr. Harry, also in costume, appeared in the kitchen door. The effect on George Washington was electrical; he removed his cigarette, slid to the floor, straightened his spinal column and awaited orders.

Mr. Harry carried a make-up box under his arm. He covered the groom's face with a layer of powder, redirected the curve of his eyebrows, added a touch of rouge and stepped back to view the effect.

"Perfect!" cried Miss Ethel. "No one one earth would recognize him."

"Peter," Mr. Harry gravely schooled him, "these are your lines for the evening. Say them after me: 'By Jove! Ripping! Oh, I say! Fancy now!'"

Peter unsmilingly repeated his lesson.

amidst driving snow, while the audience shivered in sympathy. But unluckily these tableaux were followed by no change of costume, and several others intervened before Peter's next appearance. As he was anxiously trying to obliterate himself in the shadow of a log cabin, he heard some one behind him whisper:

"Let's cut out and have a smoke. It's deucedly hot back here."

He turned to find Miles Standish, of the operetta cast, with an insistent hand on his elbow. Miles Standish in private life was a young man whose horse Peter had held many a time, and whose tips were always generous.

There seemed to be no polite means of escape, and Peter, with a suppressed grin, followed his companion to the veranda. It was lighted by a subdued glow from colored lanterns, but there was an occasional patch of dimness. He picked out a comfortable chair and shoved it well into the shadow of a convenient palm. Standish produced cigars—twenty-five-cent Havanas Peter noted appreciatively—and the two fell into conversation. Fortunately the young man aspired to the reputation of a raconteur, and he willingly bore most of the burden. Peter kept his own speeches as short as possible, manfully overcoming a tendency to end his sentences with "sir." An occasional interpolation of "By Jove!" or "I say!" in imitation of Lord Kiscadden's lazy drawl, was as far as he was required to go, and he came out of the encounter with colors still flying.

Peter suppressed the only observation that occurred to him, and the lady rattled on:

"My Irish connection is three generations back—a younger son, you know, who came to make his way in a new land and having married into one of the old Colonial families, settled for good. But once Irish, always Irish, I say. My heart warms to the little ragamuffins in the street if they have a bit of the brogue. It's the call of the blood, I suppose. Shall we sit here? Or perhaps you have an engagement—don't let me keep you—"

He summoned what wits were left and confusedly murmured: "Oh, I say! Ripping!"

They settled themselves on a rustic bench, and Peter, possessing himself of her fan, slowly waved it to and fro in the nonchalant manner of Mr. Harry. Mrs. Booth-Higby fortunately was no less garrulous than Miles Standish had been, and she chattered along, barely pausing for her companion's English interpolations.

Peter's feelings were divided. He had the amused consciousness that he was being flirted with by the lady who three days before had so condescendingly given him ten cents. And he also had a chilly apprehension of the storm that would arise if by any mischance she discovered the hoax. But his fighting blood was up and he was excited by past success. After all, he reassured himself, this was not his funeral; Miss Ethel and Mr. Harry must bear the blame, and he determined to extract what entertainment there might be in the situation.

The curtain finally fell on the last act of the operetta, and a shuffling of feet and moving of chairs betokened that a general exodus would follow. Peter came back to a realization of his predicament. While his confidence had been rising during the past half hour, he still doubted his ability to deal with the audience on masse.

But happily, the first to appear in the conservatory were Miss Ethel and Mr. Harry, engaged entirely by their own affairs, all thought of the pseudo-Kiscadden put from their minds. As they became aware of the couple on the rustic bench, they stopped short with a gasp of surprise.

"Why, Pet—" Miss Ethel caught herself, and summoning a cordial tone added quickly: "Lord Kiscadden! A telegram came a long time ago. Didn't the boy find you?"

"Oh, I say, fancy now!" George Washington jumped hastily to his feet. "Pleased to know ye, ma'am," he added with a farewell duck of his head; and without waiting for further words, he vaulted the veranda railing and disappeared around the corner of the house. He lingered a moment in the shrubbery to hear her say:

"Lord Kiscadden and I have been having such an interesting evening! What a delicious accent! Has! You must bring him to Red Towers, Mr. Jasper. I feel that he really belongs to me more than to you; we have discovered that we are distant connections."

Peter put his hand over his mouth to stifle his feelings and reeled toward the kitchen porch.

An hour later, when supper was finished, Miss Ethel and Mr. Harry slipped away from the guests and turned toward the kitchen. They paused a moment in the butler's pantry, arrested by the sound of Peter's voice as he discoursed in his richest brogue to an appreciative group of maids. He theme was the Daughters of the Revolution—it was evident that he had kept his ears open during his brief introduction to society.

"Me father was a Malone an' me mother was a Haggerty, all me ancestors on both sides bein' first-cabin passengers on the Mayflower. We straight decided from Governor Bradford, an' my fifth great-grandfather was the first man hung in the United States. I'm eligible on both sides an' me mother was a charter member. Yes, 'tis a great society! The object of it is to keep the country democratic."

They pushed open the door and entered. Peter restored to his own clothes, was seated before a table engaged between sentences with a soup plate full of ice cream. He shuffled hastily to his feet as Miss Ethel and Mr. Harry appeared and with somewhat guilty air studied their faces. He was trying to remember what he had said last.

"Peter," said Miss Ethel in a voice that meant to be severe, "what have you been telling Mrs. Booth-Higby?"

Peter shifted his weight anxiously from one foot to the other. "Nothin', ma'am."

"Nothing—nonsense! She is going about telling everybody that she is Lord Kiscadden's cousin. She never made up any such impossible story as that without help."

Miss Ethel's tone was sternly reproving, but Peter caught a gleam of malicious amusement in her eye. It occurred to him that she was as averse to an exhibition of Mrs. Booth-Higby's folly before Mr. Harry Jasper.

"It's honest wasn't my fault, Miss Ethel. I couldn't get out by the butler's pantry like you told me so I started around the back way, but just as I reached the veranda door I runs plumb into Mrs. Booth-Higby."

"Oh, me dear Lord Kiscadden!" she says, must tell you how I've enjoyed yer actin'. 'Twas great!' she says, 'you was the best person in the whole show.' An' wid that she puts a hand on my arm an' never lets go for an hour and a quarter, you know, Mr. Harry, how graspin' she is."

Peter appealed to him as one man to another. "She begun with askin' about me estate in Ireland. 'Bein' only eighteen months old when I left it, I couldn't remember many details, but I use me imagination an' done the best I could. I told her there was two lions sittin' on the gatepost holdin' me coat of arms in their paws; I told her there was two towers to the castle and a peace strolling on the lawn; an' then, not wishin' to seem boastful, 'tis a beautiful house, I says, but it ain't so grand as some. The biggest place in the neighborhood is Castle McGarragh—the name just popped into me head, Miss Ethel."

"McGarragh," she says, 'that is me own name.' 'The divil!' thinks I, 'I've put me foot in it now, but 'twas too late to go back. 'Possibly the same family,' says I politely. 'The present owner Sir Timothy McGarragh—'"

"Timothy!" she says, 'that was me father's name an' me grandfather's before him.' 'There's always one son in every generation that carries it,' says I.

"Can it be possible?" she murmurs to herself.

"Me own grandmother was a sister of the second Sir Timothy," I says, 'him as quarreled with his youngest son an' drove him to America fifty year ago.'"

"An' then she says solemn like, 'The b'y was me grandfather!—I see it all. He was a wild man an' he never talked of his people; but I always felt there was a secret a-lyin' on his mind.' An' that makes us cousins," she says. 'I must insist that ye make Red Towers yer home while ye stay in America.'"

"An' just as I was tellin' her that 'I would be pleasure, but I was engaged for all of me time you an' Mr. Harry come walkin' into the conservatory, and I made me escape.'"

Miss Ethel dropped limply into a chair.

"Peter," she gasped, "what possessed you to tell any such outrageous story as that?"

"'Twas the clothes that done it, Miss. Bei dressed as George Washington, I couldn't think of nothin' true that was fit to say."

"I don't see but what I shall have to discharge you. I shall never dare let you drive past Red Towers again."

"There's nothin' to fear," said Peter tranquilly. "She won't recognize me, ma'am. Mrs. Booth-Higby's eyes ain't focused to see a groom."

AS HE REACHED THE VERANDA DOOR HE RAN FACE TO FACE INTO MRS. BOOTH-HIGBY.

ternoon, so you know how they go. Be sure you get your wig on straight and powder, your face thick! It's half-past seven. You will have to dress immediately."

"I ain't had no supper," Peter stolidly observed.

"Annie will give you something to eat in the kitchen. We won't tell anybody except the few who are with you in the tableaux. The people in the operetta have never seen Lord Kiscadden and won't know the difference. The moment the tableaux are over you can disappear, and we will explain that you have been suddenly called away."

A slow grin spread over Peter's face.

"Are ye wantin' me to talk like him?" His lordship's idiom had been the subject of much covert amusement among the servants, and Peter could mimic it to perfection.

"I don't ask that," Miss Ethel laughed; "but at least keep still. You can pretend that you are shy."

"What did she want, Pete?" Annie inquired with eager curiosity as he reappeared.

"Don't talk to me so familiar. I'm Lord Kiscadden o' County Cork. Me family is straight descended from the kings of Ireland, and I'm masqueradin' as George Washington, who never told a lie."

An hour later Peter, in knee breeches and lace ruffles, with hat comfortably cocked toward the left ear, was sitting at ease on a corner of the kitchen table, dangling two buckled shoes into space, while a cigarette emerged at an acute angle

"And no matter what anybody says to you, you are not to go beyond that—understand?"

"Yes, sir. I'll do me best, sir." There was an anxious gleam in Peter's eye. He was suddenly being assailed by a twinge of stage fright.

"You appear first in the tableau where you say good-bye to your family before taking command of the army," Miss Ethel explained. "The moment it's over, slip out to change your costume, and stay out until after the Declaration of Independence has been signed. Don't stand around the wings where people can talk to you. Now go and wait in the butler's pantry until you are called."

Washington took an affecting leave of his family amidst an interested rustling of programmes. The applause was enthusiastic and the curtain was twice raised. As it fell for the last time a group of historical personages from the operetta cast hovered about him with congratulatory whispers. Mr. Harry, as stage manager, waved them off.

"Clear the boards for the next scene," he whispered hoarsely. "Here, Kiscadden, you'll have to hurry and dress. You cross the Delaware in ten minutes." With a hand on George Washington's shoulder he marked him off. "That was splendid, Peter," he whispered as he shunted him into the butler's pantry. "Not a soul suspected. You stay here until you are wanted."

The Delaware was crossed without mishap; also the night watch kept at Valley Forge. Washington and Lafayette crouched over their camp fire

His part of the entertainment ended with the surrender of Cornwallis, and as the curtain fell Miss Ethel whispered in his ear:

"You may go now, Peter. You've done very nicely. Slip out through the butler's pantry where none will see you. Change into your own clothes and help them in the kitchen about serving supper—and don't on any account step into the front part of the house again tonight."

"Yes, ma'am," said Peter meekly.

Finding the entrance to the butler's pantry blocked, he dived into the empty conservatory, intending to pass thence to the veranda, and so get around to the kitchen the outside way. But as he reached the veranda door he ran face to face into Mrs. Booth-Higby. Peter quickly backed into a fern-hung nook to let her pass. The light was dim, but his costume was distinctive. After a moment of hesitating scrutiny she bore down upon him.

"Oh, it's George Washington!—Lord Kiscadden, I should say. I see by the programme that your part is finished. It was so frightfully warm inside that I slipped out to get a breath of air. May I introduce myself? I am Mrs. Booth-Higby of Red Towers. I trust that you will drop in often while you are in the neighborhood. I have so wanted to have a chance to talk to you because you come from Ireland—dear old Ireland! I am Irish myself on the side that isn't Colonial, and I have a warm spot in my heart for everything green."

THE MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.
Chicago, Ill., June 17.—Relatively strong cables made a firm opening in the wheat market today, but the downward trend of prices was resumed early in the session, owing to renewed selling of a general character. During the first half hour of trading prices declined about 1/4¢ from yesterday's closing level. Weakness of the three northwestern markets, where prices were off approximately 1/4¢, was the chief reason for the fresh declines here. Opening quotations were unchanged to 1/4¢ higher, compared with last night's close, July being at $1.14 1/4 to $1.14 1/2. After selling at $1.14 1/4 to $1.14 1/2, the July option dropped to $1.13 1/4.

The market became strong during the first half of the session, July advancing to $1.15 1/4 to $1.15 1/2. The close was active and strong, with July up 1/4¢ at $1.15 1/4. Rains in sections of the corn belt prompted some buying of corn by shorts.

As a result of this demand the price of that option advanced to 72 1/2¢. The market closed strong, with July up 1/4¢ at $1.15 1/4.

Some sympathy was shown with the further rise in New York Central to 13 1/4¢, making its gain 1 1/4¢, but the room traders took advantage of the higher prices to put out more stocks and the market weakened sharply again. Representative stocks were offered freely.

LOCAL MARKET EPITOME.

Thursday proved a blank in the wholesale produce market activities today, owing to the rains; these rains, will, on the other hand, result in a good market Friday, if they continue today and cease by tomorrow morning. The farm lands will then be too wet for any cultivating work at all. Some few chickens that changed hands offside today sold at 11¢ per pound, with the prospects good for a still firmer market tomorrow. Butter and eggs remain firm.

Said G. H. Crouse, of the commission house of G. H. Crouse & Co., this morning: "Buyers are hoping for good receipts tomorrow, anticipating the Saturday trade. Prices will remain the same on all but chickens, which will probably go up a little."

Marine Officer Chapman Will Return To His Home at That Time.

Just eighty-two days remain of the four-year term of enlistment in the United States marines of Corporal Ernest Chapman, who has been on recruiting service in this city for the last seven or eight months. On September 5th, when his term expires, he expects to return to his home in Huntington, West Virginia, where he will spend some time. In the meantime, however, Corporal Chapman is busily engaged in work for his country and this morning he sent three men who enlisted to Mare Island, Cal., where they will go in training preparatory to leaving for the Philippine Islands within several months. The men are Clyde E. Shalabarger, 1423 Hurd street, this city; Reuben R. Romy, Lynn Grove, Ind.; and John J. Boone, Baltimore, Md.

Reserved Her Verdict.

A gentleman who was no longer young, and who never was handsome, said to a child in the presence of her parents:

"Well, my child, what do you think of me?"

The little girl made no reply.

"Well, you don't tell me. Why won't you?"

"Two little fat hands tucked the corners of a pinafore into her mouth, as she said archly, in a timid whisper:

"Cause I don't want to get whipped."

Zangwill's Name.
Mr. Zangwill's recent presence in this country gives timeliness to an appreciation of the author and Zionist from the pen of Clarence Rook, which appears in "Putnam's and the Reader." Mr. Rook retells the amusing and characteristic anecdotes of his reply to a lady who asked his Christian name—his usual signature being
I. Zangwill. "I have no Christian name," he answered. "My first name is Israel."

Prince Rupert's Drops.
Prince Rupert's drops are drops of molten glass, consolidated by falling to water. Their form is that of a teardrop. The thick end may be hammered, pretty smartly without its breaking, but the smallest portion of the thin end is ripped off the whole flies into fine dust with explosive violence. These toys, if not invented by Prince Rupert, were introduced by him into England.

Everyone would be benefited by taking Foley's Orino Laxative for constipation, stomach and liver trouble, as it sweetens the stomach and breath, gently stimulates the liver and regulates the bowels and is much superior to pills and ordinary laxatives. Why not try Foley's Orino Laxative today?

The different treatment extended to animals and human beings in London is shown by the reports of the workings of Our Dumb Friends league and the home office report on street accidents during 1908. The former report says that thirteen horse ambulances are in operation in the London streets, and that annually over 2,000 disabled horses are removed from the streets by the ambulances of the society.

To avoid serious results take Foley's

STEPS IN FRONT OF FAST CAR.

Mrs. Sarah Whisler, 68 Years Old and Deaf, Killed at Hobbs.

Tipton, Ind., June 17.—Mrs. Sarah
Whisler, 68 years old and deaf, stepped in front of a traction car at Hobbs, five miles east of this city, yesterday and was killed almost instantly. She had started to cross the track from her home and a building hid the approaching car.

The motorman applied the brakes, but the distance was too short in which to stop. The body was tossed a considerable distance away and the neck of the woman was broken.

Several persons witnessed the accident and exonerated the carmen.

WOLFESSAUER

The Land of Summer Cottons

In the fields of the south they bloom first in fleecy whiteness, and in our splendid wash goods department they bloom again in a loveliness and variety of pattern and color which we believe to be unrivaled.

Something New HIMALAYA CLOTH

A washable mercerized fabric that can scarcely be told from pongee silk. Retains its silky lustre after repeated launderings; 36 inches wide; 35c a yard.

SPECIAL DISPLAY OF 15c BATISTES—There are perhaps fifty or more different patterns in these sheer pretty ba-tistes at 15c. There are black and white combinations, tan and brown, blue and white and other designs innumerable; 30 inches wide; 15c a yard.

THE NEW "FLAXON"—A fresh, bright cotton, twisted and woven to imitate fine linen in colors enough for a whole household of dresses. An ideal fabric for tub dresses; 20c a yard.

WINDSOR PLISSE—To the uninitiated the name means nothing. In explanation: This is one of the new crepe fabrics in vogue this season—a remarkable, fine, crepey weave, with narrow colored stripes. Priced at 20c a yard.

WASH GOODS AT 25c—That's the price many want to pay for a strictly summer frock; 25c will buy here any of the silky solettes, the popular poplins and many fabrics of sheerer weaves.

BELFAST LINENS—The ideal fabric for jacket suits and separate skirts; plenty to select from in all widths, 27-inch to 36-inch. Priced from 20c to 40c a yard.

BORDERED LINENS—These imported bordered linens are in natural color and white, with deep borders of blue, pink and violet. A very swell, exclusive novelty. Priced at 75c a yard.

AND THEN—

"I'm glad," he said, "the noisy Fourth will never come again,
Because the people have decreed a day both safe and sane."
